PREFACE.

Some one has said that man is a quotation from all his ancestors. Our inherited characteristics are the background of ourselves, and happy the man where it glows with the light of purity and honesty. The knowledge of a noble ancestry awakens a feeling of emulation in us; and we thus put into life a diviner purpose, and make a happier impression upon the world around us. It is wise to keep in mind the best qualities which our fathers possessed; for by such we shall be inspired to become stronger and better than they were, because with the advantages of our day we act unworthily unless we rise to a higher degree of life than was possible for them.

In these pages it will be discovered that we have but little to be ashamed of, and much for gratitude, in the lives of those of our family who planned and toiled during the early history of this country. Few of their deeds have been put upon marble slabs or granite columns. but here may be found some things which they did, and when and where they lived; and with these few facts our imagination can fill out the picture of their lives, so that we may think their thoughts, witness their deeds, and dwell in their world of action.

Whatever may be our attainments, we owe much to our inheritance. With a different ancestry our lives would run in a different groove. Had they been more noble we should stand a better chance for attaining greater heights in the world; had they been less noble we might have occupied a lower plane in life. It makes a difference whether we have iron or water in the blood; and the iron or water in the blood in some degree determines the social position we occupy. Now, it is an encouragement that we can trace the iron in the lives of our fathers.

One of the marked characteristics of the earlier families was their size, varying all the way from six and eight to seventeen children. It is also noticeable that the present average number in the family is not more than half what it formerly and that some families have become extinct. Our early ancestors all farmers to some extent, and the farm afforded room for many children. In the "haleyon days of eld" he was honored who had many "ohve-plants around his table." There was ample room without touching elbows; the question for a livelihood was not so serious, and competition was scarcely known.

In tracing down the generations, it becomes apparent that more and more left the farm and entered the professions, or engaged in manufacture and trade, so that at the present time we have many merchants, lawyers, physicians, and teachers, with a spicing of clergymen. There have been many military men in our great family. We furnished some for the French and Indian wars; during the Revolutionary War we were well represented; some of our fathers engaged in the War of 1812; a few of our brothers were in the Mexican War; and a large number volunteered for the defense of our liberties during the great Rebellion; while we had brave men who held honorable positions in the war with Spain.

To the third generation the descendants of Deacon Samuel Haines made their home in Greenland. The oldest great-grandson, whose name was Samuel, was the first to go into the wilderness. Soon after 1730 he bought five hundred and ninety-two acres of land in York County, and removed to what is now Scarboro, Me. Soon after other families took up wild land in Exeter, Epsom, Deerfield, Wolfboro, and Rumney, N.H., as well as in different places in Maine and Vermont. Following generations scattered more widely, until at present we have representatives in almost every State in the Union, as well as in the newly acquired island territories.

It gives me great pleasure to speak of the work which the late lamented Andrew Mack Haines of Galena, Ill., has done for our branch of the Haines (Haynes) family. In 1848, when quite a young man, he commenced looking up the record of our ancestors, and continued his research until a few years before his death, causing records and documents, not only in this country but also in England, to be searched with the view of tracing back the line as far as possible. He gave much time and expended thousands of dollars in that effort, being painstaking and conscientious. As he was stricken with blindness he could not complete the work, which, because of having some leisure days, I have been able to do; not, perhaps, with that nicety which it ought to receive, but with some degree of satisfaction. I wish to gratefully acknowledge the courtesy of those who have aided me by extended research. Especially am I under obligation to Mr. John C. Haynes of Boston, Mass., Mr. Ashley D. Haynes of Deerfield, N.H., Mr. John Haines of Waltham, Mass., Mr. Augustine R. Ayers of Boscawen, N.H., Mrs. Winfred S. Murphy of Boston, Mass., and Miss Harriot P. Haines of Farmington, N.H., together with others without whose aid it would have been impossible to approach the present completeness of this work. But even after the most diligent inquiry there are omissions, noticeable to no one more distinctly than to the compiler.

The biographical sketches form a unique portion of the work, which will be read with interest. They would have been extended if more data along that line had been sent in. Four thousand two hundred and forty-three names have been indexed, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four of which are Haines or Haynes. As far as the record reveals, up to the sixth generation, with one exception, all the members of our family wrote the name Haines. Since then a considerable number of families, and individual members of other families, have written it Haynes. The Christian names have been spelled as they have been sent in to me, unless there was an obvious error; and some of the early names as I suppose they were spelled by those who bore them.

The oldest member by the name of Haines recorded in this book is Mehitable, daughter of Joshua Haines. She was born in Greenland, 1755, and died in Wolfboro, N.H., at the age of ninety-five years; seven months, and eighteen days. The oldest male member is Thomas Jefferson Haines, my father, who was born 1804, in Loudon, N.H., and died in New Market, Sept. 17, 1896, at the age of ninety-two years, four months, and three days.

If this work affords pleasure and profit to the living, it is my desire that it be handed down to the coming generations, and that they will pass it on to those who may follow, so that the character and life of Deacon Samuel Haines shall be potent for good to all the unborn members of the family.

THOMAS VANBUREN HATNES.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY NAME.

By reference to the foregoing record, copied from the "Stemmata Botevilliana," it appears that we are fortunate in being able to point to the fountain head of the genealogical stream which our family constitutes, and which during the past eight hundred years has spread out over the English-speaking world. Whether we have the root meaning of the name or not, we surely have the source of its formation.

The pedigree of the family connected with the armorial ensigns runs back in Montgomeryshire through Einion to Gwyn, Lord of Guilsfield, son of Griffith, son of Beli, descendant from Brockwel Yschithrog, who reigned over Powysland (Wales), A.D. 607. Einion, Prince of Powys, was distinguished in the wars against Henry I. of England, A.D. 1100-1135. He had a son whom he named after himself, but by distinction, and according to the Welsh custom of the times, he was familiarly called Einws, which was pronounced Eins. Now this son of Einion had a son John who was called John Einws - afterwards written John Eines of Bausley, in the parish of Alderbury, which parish was both in Shropshire and Montgomeryshire. Shrewsbury was the market town for this Alderbury parish. Among the ancient records of that town the name frequently occurs, and in the fifteenth and early part of the sixteenth centuries it was variously written as Eines, Eynes, Heynes, Heanes, Haines, Haynes. The pronunciation probably was the same. While but few people were able to write their name in those days, and as names appealed more to the ear than to the eye, it was very easy to give the aspirate "H," so that when written it would be Heins or Heines; and as the vowel sounds were not as sharply distinguished in those times as at present, it was easy to write the "a" in place of the "e," and the "y" in place of the "i." Thus we have the same name written by different branches of the family as Heanes, Heynes, Havnes, and Haines. It is evident that Haines is more in accord with the original name, but the difference is quite immaterial, for in all cases it is pronounced the same. Very likely, as is claimed by some English genealogists, the name for other Haines (Haynes) families may have started from one or two different sources; but the Shropshire family, to which we undoubtedly belong, starts with the Prince of Powys (Wales).

This family has become numerous in England, a considerable number of them having occupied, or are now occupying, important positions in church and state. They have been men of character, and have taken part in the great events of the times in which they lived. Some of them were sturdy Puritans, while others were loyal to the established church. Some of them were Quakers who suffered for their religious belief. Some believed in the divine right of kings, and others sighed for greater freedom than the land offered. Quite early in the great movement westward across the water, were individual members of different branches of the Haines (Haynes) family.

John Haynes of Copford Hall, Colchester, came over in 1633. He was chosen governor of the Massachusetts Colony in 1635, but removed to Hartford in 1637, joining the colony which went with Rev. Thomas Hooker to that place. He became the first governor of Connecticut, and was a man of wealth, of generous spirit, and wide influence. His descendants have been a power for good in the country.

Walter Haynes of Sutton, Mandeville, Wiltshire, a linen-weaver, at the age of fifty-five came to this country in 1638 with family and servants, in the ship Confidence, and in the following year settled in Sudbury, Mass. Jonathan Haynes came over in 1632, and settled in Newbury, Mass., but in 1686 removed with his family to Haverhill, where he was killed by the Indians, Feb. 22, 1698. Benjamin Haines came from England, and was settled at Southampton, L.I., Then Richard Haines of Aynhoe, Northamptonshire, in 1639. England, is at the head of another large and influential family, which settled at Evesham, Burlington County, N.J., in 1682. And John Hayne, dropping the terminal letter on coming to this country, from near Shrewsbury, Shropshire, England, settled in St. Bartholomew Parish, Collecton County, S.C., in 1700, and became the ancestor of men of note. There were others from across the sea who made their home in the New World, perhaps of a later period, whose descendants are not to be despised. These were good and true men whose lives added wealth and wisdom to the land. But not the least of the patriarchs who struck out boldly for freedom and success in the wilds of America was our ancestor, Samuel Haines, who, drenched by the mighty sea which wrecked the vessel on which he came, set foot on this shore Aug. 15, 1635, and to whom and his descendants this work is primarily devoted.

THE HAINES ARMS.

HERALDRY probably dates from the use of armor which covered the person of knights in battle, and rendered necessary some sign by which the person might be known. Armorial bearings were used in the time of Henry I., and were common during the Crusades. It appears that about the year 1300 coats-of-arms were well systematized, and were in common use. Some time in the twelfth century they were made hereditary, and were highly valued, as no person in England below the dignity of a Knight of the Bath had a right to them, except by special royal grant.

The most ancient coat-of-arms borne by our family was conferred upon Sir Eynns, who was among the knights of Shropshire in the reign of King Edward I., A.D. 1272–1307. It consisted of "a silver shield with fesse gules with three roundles." Afterwards the family added the greyhound, and changed the color of the field and the roundles from silver to gold.

In the Heralds' College in London, where the record of the arms legally borne was made, we learn that on the first visitation of the king-at-arms to Shropshire, A.D. 1569, the Haines blazonry is described as "Or. on a fesse gules three bezants; and in chief a greyhound courant sable collared of the second" (a golden shield with a horizontal red band across the middle, on which are three gold coins, and in the upper part a black greyhound running, who wears a red collar). Now it is probable that Sir Eynns took part in the wars of the Crusades in which Edward engaged before he became king, as the three bezants had taken the place of the three roundles. A shield with bezants signified that the bearer was a Crusader. Bezants were old Byzantium coin of gold.

In the second visitation of the king's officer to examine the arms in Shropshire, A.D. 1584, a crest appears of an eagle displayed azure, sprinkled with silver stars. Such had been quite recently added, and was truly expressive.

$\begin{array}{c} HAINES \\ HAYNES \end{array} GENEALOGY. \end{array}$

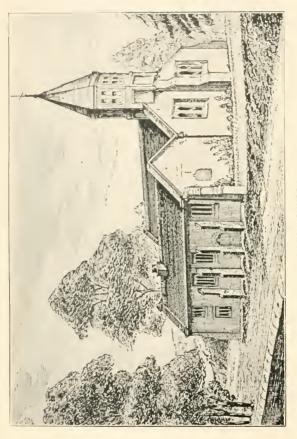

But in the visitation which was made in 1663 there appeared the double crest; that is, not only the eagle displayed azure, sprinkled with silver stars, but an additional eagle displayed or. (gold), standing on a tortoise argent (silver). This did not appear in the records until Sept. 4, 1607, when it was granted or confirmed to Thomas Havne of Dorsetshire by William Segar, garter-king-at-arms. The crest was worn upon the helmet anciently, and sometimes when appearing on the arms the helmet itself was represented. Where the helmet is wanting, it is always understood that the crest is based upon a wreath. In our coat-of-arms when there was but a single crest, it probably was over the center of the shield: but when the second was added the first was made the sinister crest, and the second became the dexter crest, thus giving the blazon of the Shropshire family of Haineses.

In a blank space on a leaf of the Bible * brought over to this country by Samuel Haines, our aneestor, in 1635, is a well-drawn greyhound courant and collared, which doubtless is an index to the arms which his family had borne. The greyhound † is an emblem of loyalty, and from what we know of our ancestor it was very fitting that he should have selected that charge from the Haines escutcheon as an illustration of his character.

The College of Arms in London contains some thirty different styles of heraldie ensigns borne by different members of the Haines (Haynes) family. Only four or five, however, are of ancient origin. The others are modifications which appeared later.

In the early days no motto was written on the arms, but in more modern times different members of the various branches of our family have used what was regarded as singularly significant for them. Mr. A. M. Haines, by whose toil and patience this work has been made possible, and who some years ago published some of the facts above stated, chose a most appropriate motto — "There is no difficulty to him that wills."

It is a matter of great interest to know that Mrs. Edwin Stone, of Biddeford, Me. (see family 238, 7), has the desk which was used by Deacon Samuel Haines, also his dining-table. They are of English maple. The desk is three feet long, and three feet, four inches high. It has four large drawers, with the original brass handles, and a lid which turns down for writing. Inside there are eight pigeon-holes, with drawers beneath. And dividing these is a compartment with a door, which when opened, and a drawer within removed, discloses a spring. On pressing this spring the whole compartment comes out, and just back of this are two secret drawers. The table is about four feet long, and has two folding leaves, which when opened extend five feet. It is very dark in color, and has wooden claw feet.

There is also a chair in the possession of Mrs. William S. Whitney, of Lawrence, Mass., which our first ancestor brought to this country. It has a straight back, and until recently had the original leather cover, studded with brass nails.

If any person has other relics aside from the Bible and cane, it would be pleasing to have a description given.

DEACON SAMUEL HAINES AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

FIRST AND SECOND GENERATIONS.

1.

Samuel Haines was born in England in 1611. At fifteen years of age he was apprenticed to John Cogswell of Westbury, Wiltshire, a cloth manufacturer, who owned mills in Frome, Somersetshire, a few miles from Westbury. It appears that his apprenticeship was to continue for ten years; but after having served nine years, he came to New England in 1635 with Mr. Cogswell in the ship * Angel Gabriel, which sailed from Kings Roads, Bristol, England, June 4, and from Milford Haven, Wales, on the 22d of the same month. After a voyage of ten weeks and two days from Bristol, coming near the coast of Maine, they anchored on the night of the 14th of August in the outer harbor of Pemaquid, now Bristol; and there they encountered the "Great Hurricane" which occurred on the following day, when the storm was so severe that the vessel was driven on shore and broken in pieces; and although several persons perished, and much of the cargo was destroyed, yet they saved a considerable quantity of their personal effects, so that they were able to live on the shore in a tent, which Mr. Cogswell had taken with him, until the arrival of Goodman Gallup's bark from Boston, which took them with a large portion of their possessions to Ipswich, Mass., where Mr. Cogswell made his home. Samuel Haines remained with him one year to complete the term of his apprenticeship; and having fulfilled his obligations for service, he outlined plans for the future in this then wild country, doubtless arranging to cast in his lot with the settlers at Northam, now called Dover Point.

* See Appendix, No. 3.

In 1638 he returned to England, prolonging his visit one and a half years, and in the meantime, on April 1, 1638, was married to Ellenor Neate in the church at Dilton, * Wiltshire, near Westbury, where he had previously lived. As he was married within a few weeks after returning to his native land, it is safe to infer that he was engaged to his bride before coming to this country, and that he made the long and perilous voyage across the sea that he might claim the lady of his choice. On his return to this country they established their home in Northam, where he had ten acres of land near the first church. Afterwards there were set off to him twenty acres on the west side of Baek River. He had for neighbors William Furber and John Tuttle, and perhaps others who were fellow passengers with him on the ship Angel Gabriel.

The patent of land on which he settled had been granted to Edward Hilton, but conveyed by him to Capt. Thomas Wiggin and his associates, who were from Shrewsbury, England, where the early Haines family lived. Such may have been a factor in the choice of location of our first ancestor.

We find that Samuel Haines was one of the signers on Oct. 16, 1640, of what was called the "Dover Combination." This must have been shortly after he had established his home at Northam, where he remained ten years. He was taxed in Dover in 1648 and 1649.

Either because he was not satisfied with his location, or because he saw that it would be more profitable, in 1650 he rented Capt. Francis Champernown's farm at Strawberry Bank, so named because of the strawberries found there. In company with Lieut. Neal he took the farm "to the thirds." It appears that he took a deed of the farm for the satisfying of a "certain debte," and that he lived there two years. In the meantime he secured ninety-one acres of land adjoining the Champernown farm, where he built himself a house and made a permanent home. By purchase and by grant of common lands from the town he came into possession of many acres.† ridge of land which now commands a pleasing view of the surrounding country. There could have been but a small hamlet where he settled; for there were at that time but fifty or sixty families in what now constitutes New Castle, Portsmouth, Greenland, and Newington. The larger part of the country around was as yet unsubdued by ax or plow, so the comforts and privileges were comparatively few. Travel to the more thickly settled part of the town was by water, or by a circuitous and rough path through the forest. The Indians were a menace, and wild animals were in the woods. Foreign supplies must have been costly and few, and the support of a family was the price of unceasing toil, while educational and religious privileges were obtained only by great effort.

Our ancestor seems to have been sturdy and strong, for he was able to more than hold his own. In addition to the large tract of land which he had secured, he bought a part of the saw-mill * which was located near his home, paying for it one hundred and ten pounds. He was a highly respected citizen, and occupied important positions of trust.

But there were adversaries to contend with as well as a rigorous climate and hard soil. In 1683, after he had made his land pleasant with the labor of thirty years, Robert Mason, Esq., laid claim to it, together with that of others, and tried to eject him, but without success. In the following year he made a second effort, putting the land-holders under bond to appear in court at New Castle, but his plans did not succeed. The titles were good.

The four towns within the limits of New Hampshire, having put themselves under the protection of the Colony of Massachusetts, in 1653, Samuel Haines was one of the signers, petitioning the General Court at Boston to change the name of the town from Strawberry Bank to Portsmouth, which was done. The same year he was chosen one of the selectmen of Portsmouth, to which office he was elected for ten successive years. In 1666 he was employed to assist in running the town line between Portsmouth and Hampton. In 1678 the town intrusted to him the keeping of an orphan child for a period of fifteen years for a stipulated sum of money.

Aside from his business sagacity he was a religious man,† being one of the number who organized the North Church in Portsmouth; and as soon as Rev. Joshua Moodey was settled as their pastor, he was ordained Deacon of the church by the "imposition of hands and prayer." This was in 1671, although religious services had been held in town for the greater part of the time since 1638. In 1675 the town granted "Deacon Haines" the privilege of hitching his horse in "the pound" on Sundays for shelter and protection. It was a long distance for him to travel to church, and that act indicates that he made the journey sometimes in rough weather.

When by the weight of years his infimities increased, he deemed it wise to deed his homestead to his eldest son, Samuel,* reserving a sufficient life support for himself and wife. The exact date of his death is not on record; but it must have occurred about 1686, at the age of about seventy-five years. His wife was living at the time he made his will in 1682, but the exact date of her death is not determined.

They were buried on a bold promontory jutting a little into the Winnieut, thirty or forty feet above the river, — a beautiful, quiet spot, now covered with a wooded growth, at the foot of which the tide has ebbed and flowed by their graves for almost two and a quarter centuries. At this place it is said that more than one hundred of the first settlers of the town of Greenland have been laid away. This "God's acre" is but a short distance from the old Haines homestead.

THIRD GENERATION.

≈.

(1) Samuel<sup>2</sup> Haines (Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Dover, and at the age of four years went with his father to what is now Greenland. At the age of twenty-seven he married Mary Fifield of Hampton, with whom he lived about sixteen years, when he died at the early age of forty-three. He came into possession of his father's homestead by will-deed, dated Dec. 28, 1682. It appears that he spent his life upon the farm. He was a member of the North Church in Portsmouth. In 1683 he signed a petition setting forth grievances growing out of the Mason Patent. He did considerable business at the saw-mill, as well as on the farm. On the 19th of January, 1749, Elias Philbrick of Greenland, in a deposition before Justices of the Peace, said * "that the deponent remembers the said Samuel Haines built a Garrison where he lived, and Remembers the names and Color of the Oxen (belonging to said Samuel) which were employed in haling the timber for that Purpose: that the said Samuel was the Elder of the two Brothers. and Died first, tho. they died within a week of one another, and according to this deponent's Remembrance it is about fifty-nine years ago, but how much more he is not certain and cannot Say; and he well Remembers that it was a thing much observed as a Remarkable Providence and that it was in the winter time." He built the garrison at the breaking out of King William's war in 1689. His wife, Mary, was living April 27, 1723. She died within two years of that time.

(1) Matthias<sup>2</sup> Haines (Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born at Strawberry Bank, afterwards Portsmouth, now Greenland, and after marrying Jane Brackett he settled near the old homestead. He, with Leonard Weeks, was appointed in his father's will to see that his brother executed all the provisions of the will. On June 28, 1671, he made testimony to the usual privilege of drawing logs across land from the river to the saw-mill. He was juryman in 1683. On Jan. 18. 1747. John Smith of North Hampton testified * that "Matthias Haines lived near where Daniel Lunt then lived, that he and his brother Samuel died in the winter time within a few days of one another, and that the event was very much taken notice of, and considered as a Remarkable Providence, for they were Noted Men and carried on their work and business together in Partnership." There is a tradition in the family, that when he was going from his home to the house of George Weeks he dropped dead in the road. We have no record of his wife's death.

CHILDREN :

FOURTH GENERATION.

4.

(2) Matthias <sup>3</sup> Haines (Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Samuel <sup>1</sup>) was about twelve years old when his father died, and was heir to the old homestead, according to the will-deed of his grandfather. He was called Lieut. Haines; was one of the selectmen of Greenland for several years, and was a member of the "General Assembly," Aug. 29, 1732, which body at that time was composed of noted men. In 1715 he and his wife joined the Congregational church in Greenland, of which he afterwards was chosen deacon, and was generally known as "Deacon Haines."

It appears that he was a prosperous man, as he not only secured an increase of land in Greenland, but came into possession of a large tract in the town of Epsom, N.H.* His wife conveyed land to her son-in-law, Joshua Haines. in 1758.

There is a tradition in the family that he was killed by a barn door falling on him when he was sixty-nine years of age. She survived her husband twenty-three years, dying at the age of eighty-five.

CHILDREN :

- Samuel, b. in Greenland, April 20, 1716; m. Sarah Whidden, Aug. 12, 1744. She was b. Feb. 22, 1720, and was living Feb. 19, 1766. He d. 1786.

(3) Matthias<sup>3</sup> Haines (Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was a native of Greenland, and spent his days there. He was called Matthias Jr., to distinguish him from his cousin Dea. Matthias. He deeded one-fourth part of the grist-mill near the Great Bridge to his son John, April 15, 1755. He and his wife released to Ensign John Johnson their right in their father, John Johnson's estate — "sixty acres of marsh, fruit trees, orchard, and garden; also one-half of their part of the 'Brigantine,' and one-half of the loading of the same, and one-half of their right to the saw-mill." He is called a "Housewright." His wife, Hannah Johnson, was a granddaughter of Philip Lewis of Greenland. — (See Appendix, No. 12.)

(4) Samuel<sup>4</sup> Haines (Matthias,<sup>3</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Greenland and inherited the old homestead, on which he lived for fifty years, enjoying the improvement made by three preceding generations. He was chosen constable at Greenland, March 13. 1749; and was chosen to take account of "heads and stocks" in 1755. On the 19th of February, 1766, he sold his farm, which had been in the family for over one hundred years, to Enoch Clark for five hundred pounds, and moved from there to that part of Wakefield which is now Union Village. He was the oldest of the nine persons who organized the Congregational church at Wakefield Corner in 1785. The town records read, "Road to Lower Grist Mill laid out," 1777, and in May of the same year, "Haines Grist Mill road laid out." After an honorable and useful life he died in the town of his adoption, and was buried in a quiet spot opposite to where the railroad station now is. His wife went with him to Wakefield, but the date of her death is not determined.

Meetinghouse." He was appointed by the town to inspect the "upper parsonage." On March 27, 1769, he deeded one-half sawmill, on Winnieut River. He told Mr. Thomas Norton of Newmarket, who in 1850 repeated it to A. M. Haines, Esq., of Galena, Ill., that "the Haineses of Greenland were of Welsh origin, or that Deacon Samuel Haines was originally from Wales, or one of the adjoining counties." There probably can be no mistake in this family tradition, as he was born within twenty-five years after Deacon Samuel Haines died. He and his wife Abigail joined the Congregational church in Greenland in 1742.

(7) Samuel<sup>4</sup> Haines (Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Greenland at the close of the seventeenth century. He was the oldest great-grandson of Dea. Samuel Haines, and the first Haines to remove from Greenland into the wilderness. He and Patience Piner were married at Newington by Rev. Joseph Adams, an uncle of President John Adams. He was captain of a cavalry company, raised to defend the inhabitants against the Indians. He deeded forty acres of the old homestead of his grandfather to Daniel Lunt, Sept. 21, 1727. On July 1, 1729, he conveyed all his interest in his father's estate to his brother John of Exeter. He received a deed, Dec. 16, 1731, for a tract of land in York County, Me., two miles in length and one hundred and forty-eight poles in width, equal to five hundred and ninety-two acres. This doubtless was in what is now a part of the town of Scarboro, Me., for there he made his home. He and his wife united with the First Congregational Church in Scarboro, April 25, 1742.

  - Josiah, removed to Vermont. Probably he is the Josiah Haines who enlisted in Colonel Stickney's Regiment at Andover, N.H., July 5, 1779, for Continental service under Colonel Hercules Mooney in Rhode Island. He received forty-five pounds lawful money from the town of Andover as bounty and for travel, to join the army in Rhode Island. It is recorded that he enlisted "voluntarily in service of United States, to serve six months from time we join the army at Providence, R.I.; and will submit to the rules and regulations of the army." He enlisted again in Ebenezer Webster's Company of Rangers, for the defense of the western frontier, July 20, 1782, and was discharged Nov. 7, 1782, having served three months and sixteen days, and allowed for sixty miles outward travel.

(8) Joshua<sup>4</sup> Haines (Joshua,<sup>3</sup> Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Greenland, where he resided for sixty years, and was a blacksmith by trade. He was a man of much importance in the town. On July 25, 1764, fourth year King George, Benning Wentworth, Esq., "Gov.-in-chief in and over His Majesty's Province of New Hampshire in New England," gave a commission to "Joshua Haines, Gent, appointed Ensign of the 7th Company of Militia. Province aforesaid." He was surveyor of the town of Greenland for several years, also one of the selectmen, and was on the "Committee of Safety" for a number of years. In December, 1776, he was elected representative and councillor for the county of Rockingham. The year following he represented the town in the "General Assembly." He was one of Capt. Henry Elkins's Company for the defense of Piscataqua Harbor in 1775. On July 29, 1777, he was chosen as one of a committee to regulate the price of goods in the town. Having purchased three hundred acres of land in Wolfboro, he moved there in 1784, and spent the remainder of his days, earrying on blacksmithing as well as farming. His wife, Mary, who was the daughter of Deacon Matthias and Mehitable (Jenness) Haines, died prior to 1800; for in his will, dated April 10, 1800, she is not mentioned. The sons mentioned are Joshua, to whom he gave one dollar; to Jacob he gave "my blacksmith shop and tools. To Jacob and Joseph he gave "all my farm, farming tools, neat stock, sheep, lambs, and barn forever, excepting two cows, four sheep, and one-half of the dwelling-house. To his daughters Hannah and Mehitable Haines, he gave "all my furniture, my mare, two cows, also the easterly half of my dwellinghouse." He gave "my daughter Sarah, wife of Benjamin Savage, $50. — to my sister Jane a comfortable support during her natural life." He appointed his sons Jacob and Joseph sole executors. He died in Wolfboro at the age of ninety years.

(9) Abner<sup>4</sup> Haines (Matthias,<sup>3</sup> Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was a native of Greenland, and lived there until he was fifty-two years of age, and his children were grown. At the age of twenty-two he married Sarah Weeks of Greenland. He was respected and trusted by his townsmen, who chose him to various offices, as surveyor, constable, tythingman, etc. He was on the committee to provide for the ordination of Rev. Samuel McClintock, which occurred Nov. 3, 1756. He was executor of his father's estate in 1771. He and his wife deeded ninety acres of land on Winnecut River and Great Bay to Ichabod Weeks, May 8, 1772. He received a deed of one hundred and twenty acres of land in Canterbury, from Jeremiah Clough, June 3, 1772. In the same year he removed from Greenland to Orford, N.H., but did not long remain there, for the next year he settled in Canterbury. His wife, Sarah Weeks, was born in the "old brick house" of the Weeks family, and was a sister to Ichabod Weeks, a physician. She was paralyzed and completely helpless for many years before her death, which occurred when she was sixty-eight years of age.

(10) Joseph <sup>5</sup> Haines (Samuel,<sup>4</sup> Matthias,<sup>3</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Greenland, married Betsey Hoitt, and removed with his family in company with his father to Wakefield. He owned all the land where Union Village now is. There he built a grist-mill in company with Rev. Avery Hall, son of Thomas Hall of Meriden, Conn., and pastor of the Congregational church in Rochester from Oct. 15, 1766, to April 10, 1775, and who died at Wakefield at the age of eighty-three years. Joseph Haines was the custodian of the old "Haines Bible," receiving it from his father. About 1775 he was corporal, ensign, lieut., in Capt. Jeremiah Gilman's Co., Col. Stickney's Regiment, Gen. Stark's Brigade, and marched to reinforce the Continental army, July 20, 1777. He was in the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777. He was discharged Sept. 30, same year. On Feb. 7, 1800, he deeded one-half of his saw-mill with privilege to Robert Cook of Middleton. On May 9, 1809, he deeded to John Reily of Salem, Mass., one hundred and ten acres of land, which included the "homestead farm," for $989.48. He died at the age of about eighty-three years; and his grave, with that of his father, is opposite the railroad station, on land which in his will he reserved as a burial place. His wife united with the Congregational church in 1786. She died in 1803.

(17) Samuel<sup>5</sup> Haines (Samuel,<sup>4</sup> Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Scarboro, Me., being the first of the descendants of Deacon Samuel Haines to be born out of the town of Greenland. When twenty-seven years of age, with his brother Thomas, he served in Capt. Jonathan Bean's Co., raised at Saco for the reduction of Canada, serving from Nov. 5, 1758, to Oct. 27, 1759. They were with Wolf at the taking of Quebec, Sept. 13, 1759. If at that period he was loyal to George the Third, he was no less a patriot in the days of the Revolution, for he served his country through the war. One of his enlistments is "from Cumberland Co., for the term of nine months from the time of his arrival at Fishkill, N.Y. — age forty-two years, stature five feet five inches; complexion, light; residence, Scarboro — belonging to Capt. Andrews' Co., Col. Fogg's Regt." He married Hannah Seavey of Scarboro, and she kept the hearth-fire burning while he was in the army.

(24) Joseph<sup>6</sup> Haines (Matthias,<sup>5</sup> Samuel,<sup>4</sup> Matthias,<sup>8</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was twelve years old when his father removed from Greenland to Loudon, on Feb. 27, 1796. Nine years after he went from Loudon to Salem, Mass., where he found his wife, Martha Dwinell, daughter of Capt. John and Elizabeth (Kittredge) Dwinell, and granddaughter of Dr. John Kittredge of North Andover, Mass. In 1813 he returned to Loudon with his family, having then three children. He remained there until his death, with the exception of a few years' residence in Canterbury, an adjoining town. He was taken away in the midst of his manly efforts for the support of his family at the age of forty-four years. After her husband's decease Mrs. Haines removed to Gilmanton Corner, evidently for the educational advantages offered to her family; but in the summer of 1832 she returned to Salem, and two years later she removed to Lynn, which continued to be her home for twenty-nine years, and where she died at the age of seventy-eight.

It is written of her: "The deceased was a sister of Mr. A. M. Haines, whose house had been her home for some years. She was a lady of education and culture, and had taught school for several years in the New England States. She had been in her usual health until one week previous to her death, and at no time during that period was her illness regarded as dangerous till she breathed her last. Her death was very sudden and unexpected. She was a consistent and devoted member of the Episcopal church."

(46) John Dearborn<sup>6</sup> Haynes (Elisha,<sup>5</sup> John,<sup>4</sup> Matthias,<sup>3</sup> Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Epsom, and spent his early boyhood on the When about twenty-six years of age he married Eliza farm. Walker Stevens, with whom he lived over four years, when she died. The year following he married Mary Leavitt, with whom he lived seventeen years, when he died at nearly forty-eight years of age. They lived first in Brighton, then in Boston. He was a strong man, industrious and trustworthy, successful in his business, and true in his friendships. He was an enthusiastic sportsman, and would improve every offered occasion for hunting. About two years before his death, while in good health, he came home from his daily occupation after dark as usual. His residence at that time was on Harmony Court, leading from Canal Street, across the way from the canal which ran from the harbor to Haymarket Square. This canal was infested with what is known as wharf-rats, immense fellows and somewhat dangerous. On the evening referred to, Mr. Havnes took a lamp and went to the cupboard for food, and as he opened the door a large rat leaped from one of the shelves, and fastened its teeth in one of his hands between two fingers. He could not shake him off, but had to kill the rodent, and then with difficulty unlock its teeth. Very soon his arm became swollen, and a painful and dangerous illness came on which confined him to his home for many weeks, and from which he never fully recovered, but had periods of nausea and vomiting, while he gradually lost his strength, developing consumption, which terminated in death. It was considered a notable case, and was widely published in the medical journals of the country. His wife survived him more than twelve years, dying at the age of about forty-eight.

of his father, he went to live with his uncle, Asa Jewell, in Stratham, at the age of twelve years. He received his higher education at Hampton Academy, a noted literary institution at that time. Afterwards he learned the mason's trade in Stratham. Then he went to New York, where he constructed several large buildings in the vicinity of Broadway and Canal Street, which was then a popular dwelling district. At the age of about twenty-four he married Mary Rollins of Stratham, with whom he lived forty-seven years, when she died at the age of seventy. They lived in New Market, Northwood, and Concord, N.H., where he worked at his trade, and for several winters taught school. He afterwards became a farmer in New Market, where he died at the age of ninety-two years and four months. He was a progressive man of high aims, decided in his views, strong in his affections, persevering in his purposes, sound in judgment, charitable in opinion, and a learner in piety. He was deacon of the Free Baptist church in Northwood, and for many years he held the same office in the Free Baptist church in New Market. He was selectman of the town of Durham, in which town he lived for a few years, until a portion of that town was annexed to New Market. He was for many years a member of the Rising Star Lodge of F.&A.M., and for sixty-nine years he belonged to the Washington Chapter, No. 3, Royal Arch Masons, in Portsmouth. Being of strong constitution, he experienced but few days of sickness during his long life, and so was enabled to accomplish a great amount of work in making the world better.

(59) Washington 7 Haines (John, 6 Matthias, 5 Samuel, 4 Matthias, 3 Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Loudon, but when quite young struck out for himself in the world. He inherited a love for machinery, and became a mechanic, working in different places until he was able to purchase a mill for himself. At the age of about twenty-six he married Eunice Conant, with whom he lived nearly five years, when she died. Three years later he married Abigail Folsom, daughter of Josiah Folsom of New Market, with whom he lived forty-six years, when he died at the age of eighty years and eight months. After purchasing his mill in New Market he became a manufacturer of cotton batting, in which business he continued until he retired from business. He was known in the commercial world as strictly honest and perfectly reliable. Being social in his habits, choice in his tastes, and decided in his views, he made friends and held them. He was sound in judgment, charitable in spirit, and brave in misfortune. For several years previous to his death he suffered from rheumatism, sometimes severely, becoming at last totally blind. ANDREW MACK HAINES. Born, Jan. 1, 1820; died, Nov. 10, 1898. (See No. 147.)

147.

(62) Andrew Mack 7 Haines (Joseph, 6 Matthias, 5 Samuel, 4 Matthias,<sup>3</sup> Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Canterbury the first day of the year 1820. When he was two years of age his parents removed to Loudon, where they had formerly lived. Seven years later, after the death of his father, the family removed to Gilmanton, remaining there three years, when they went to Salem, Mass. Two years later they removed to Lynn. At the age of nineteen he went to Galena, Ill., arriving there Aug. 13, 1839. After ten years' residence in that place, he returned to Lynn, but three years later went to Galena, where he spent the greater part of the remainder of his life. He was educated at Gilmanton Academy, a notable institution of that day. At the age of twenty-two he married Angeline Elizabeth Woodbury, dau. of John and Sarah (Allen) Woodbury of Lynn, and a descendant of John Woodbury, who came from Somersetshire. England, to Cape Ann in 1824, and settled in Salem, Mass., 1826. Two years after his marriage he and wife united with the First Presbyterian Church in Galena of which he afterwards became one of the deacons. He was for many years a prosperous merchant; also he became a noted genealogist, having a wide correspondence throughout this country and in Eugland, and for more than forty-five years collected facts relating to the descendants of Deacon Samuel Haines, which collection constitutes the greater part of this book. He held various offices in the city of his adoption, and was by all regarded as a man of great integrity of character, of admirable self-poise, markedly generous spirit, and kindly feelings. He was an intimate friend of President Grant, with whom he sat at the table at the great reception which the city gave the President. He lived with his wife fifty-six years, dying Nov. 10, 1898, in his seventy-eighth year. He was seriously afflicted with disease of the eyes, and during the last years of his life was totally blind. (See Biographical Sketches.)

following tribute was sent to both houses of the Wisconsin Legislature by the Governor:

"EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, MADISON, W18., MARCH 26. To the Honorable Legislature:

It is my duty to inform you of the death of Timothy O. Howe. He expired on Sunday afternoon, March 25, 1883, at Kenosha, and is lamented by the State and nation. His long career of faithful and distinguished public usefulness, and his upright and just character, made him universally known and beloved throughout the State, and gave him a high position in the Councils of the nation. Such honors as the Legislature has heretofore conferred upon him, and every mark of respect that may be bestowed, have been merited by his life of noble, loyal devotion to duty and his sense of right. The funeral will take place at Kenosha, Wednesday, March 28, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and thereafter the remains will be taken to their last resting-place at Green Bay on the evening train.

J. M. RUSK, Governor."

(117) Elbridge Gerry 7 Haynes (James, 6 Elisha, 5 John, 4 Matthias, 3 Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Allenstown, where he spent his boyhood. His early educational advantages were such as were offered the common country boy at the district school. He was ambitious, and determined to make much of himself in the world. So when he was nineteen years of age he bought his time of his father, paying one hundred and fifty dollars for the same. Then with but two dollars in his pocket he started for Boston, and in due time appeared in Haymarket Square with his trunk on his shoulder, and only a few cents of change remaining. He found work, and prospered for six years, when he returned to New Hampshire, and at the age of twenty-five married Caroline R. Knowlton, and made his home on a farm in Springfield which he had bought. But he could not limit his lifework to the farm. So he removed to Manchester, then a rapidly growing town, learned the mason's trade, and became a builder. He prospered and spent the remainder of his life there. He was honest, frank, and even-tempered, and took an active part in what he believed would promote the interests of the eity. He was respected and honored, being for many years connected with the city government, and elected a State Senator. He died at the age of sixty-six years, having made the world better by living in it. His widow is still living in Manchester.

(285) Samuel<sup>9</sup> Haines (Josiah M.,<sup>8</sup> Samuel,<sup>7</sup> John,<sup>6</sup> Timothy,<sup>5</sup> Samuel,<sup>4</sup> Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Matthias,<sup>2</sup> Samuel<sup>1</sup>) was born in Bingham, Me., but educated in the public schools in Waterville. When he was sixteen years old he shipped for a whaling voyage with his uncle, Capt. Richard Luce of Martha's Vineyard. He continued in that business for many years, and obtained the rank of captain. On the decline of the whaling business, he entered the merchant service, and made long voyages on the Pacific, visiting remote parts of the world then but little known. He was wrecked, and barely saved his life, in the great gale which swept the harbor of San Francisco in the early history of California. One time he was in collision with a British ship in the China Sea, when his vessel went down in about three hours. The crew were in a boat for several days without food, and picked up by a passing vessel. On the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion, he was appointed sailing-master of the gunboat Ottawa. He was at the battle of Hilton Head, and at the taking of Port Royal, S.C.; also at the taking of Fort Clinch and the works around Fernandina, Fla. His vessel was the flagship in the expedition to Jacksonville and the opening of the St. John's River. He was in the siege of Charleston, S.C., and there experienced a sunstroke. After the close of the war he was given command of the Beacon and the Badger, and stationed on the North Atlantic. His last voyage was to the coast of Africa in government service. With health impaired through war service, he retired from the navy. He was a brave and faithful officer, and received the esteem of his superiors and subordinates. At the age of twenty-nine he married Abby Lewis of Sydney, Me. He died at the age of sixty-nine, having been a man of strong character and great fortitude.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

ANDREW MACK HAINES.

[The following is the substance of a paper prepared by Mr. Haines about nineteen years previous to his death, changed some in expression and order, but not in fact. — EDITOR.]

ANDREW MACK HAINES was born in Canterbury, on the first day of the year 1820, in which town his parents had taken up their residence for a few years, but returned to Loudon, where they had before lived in 1822. He says, "The place of my birth was in a house standing on the highway leading from Hill's Corner, in Canterbury, to Gilmanton Academy, via Greely's Hill, and on what was known as "Greely's Mountain," and about three-fourths of a mile north-west from Rocky Pond, the source of the Suncook River, and near the line of Gilmanton." He was named for Andrew Mack, A.M., whose father lived on an adjoining farm, and whose grandmother was Isabella Brown, daughter of the Lord of Londonderry, Ireland, and a schoolmate, at Londonderry, N.H., of Mr. Haines's mother.

He was the seventh of a family of eight children. His father died when he was but eight years of age, leaving his mother, a remarkable woman, to struggle with adversity, yet uncomplainingly with faith and trust in providing for and educating her children. With this object in view, she removed from Loudon to Gilmanton Corner, on the eighteenth day of April, 1829, when the snow was piled high above the fences along the road. He was sent to the district school for about six months in a year, from the time he was six years of age. In Gilmanton he first attended the village school, having for one of his teachers Augustus C. French, who was afterwards Governor of Illinois for the period of eight years. From the district school he went to the Academy, then under the administration of John L. Parkhurst, A.M., where his oldest brother, Joseph, had been educated. In the spring of 1832 his mother concluded to remove to Salem, Mass., where she had a brother and sister, and where her older sons, Joseph and John Kittredge, were located, and engaged in cabinet manufacturing. So a reluctant "good by" was said to the old Academy and its associations, and a larger life was begun. At the age of twelve years he entered into the employment of Charles C. Currier, a native of Hopkinton, N.H., who was a merchant and ship-owner, and with Capt. Isaac B. Shepherd was engaged in the "Martinique trade." West Indies, where he remained until Sept. 3, 1833, when he entered as one of the seventh class in the English High School. Salem, then under the administration of William H. Brooks. Out of sixty applicants, but thirty-one were admitted. While with Mr. Currier he had the privilege of sending adventures to the West Indies for his own benefit and encouragement; so that before he was fourteen years old, he became an importer, and had invoices and other papers made out as formally as those which related to the vessel's cargo. His returns consisted of coffee, tamarinds, and guava jelly. He remained in the High School until August, 1834, when his mother thought it best to make her residence in Lynn, Mass., where his oldest brother, Joseph, was then engaged in mercantile business, and for whom he became a clerk, remaining there until July, 1839. He had a very strong desire to follow the sea, and studied navigation with that in view; and before he was eighteen years old he could build a miniature vessel with its spars and rigging complete, which would pass a critical examination of an old sailor. He sold one of these miniature ships, the building of which had cost him several months of his leisure time, to William Fenno, Esq., of Boston. In 1836 he purchased in Charlestown the sloop-yacht Union which was the first craft owned in Lynn of that kind; of this he became a very skillful navigator in the harbors of Lynn, Boston, and in the Bay generally, spending the larger portion of his leisure time very pleasantly. This inereased his longing for maritime adventures; but his mother objected to such a life work, as she already had one son on his second voyage to India, so he promised that he would give up his cherished intention of becoming a sailor, and never refer to the subject again, which promise he strictly kept, and never regretted it.

His elder brother, Joseph, took a great interest in him, and encouraged him in his High School studies at Salem, assisting him as far as he was able. For this aid he always felt deep gratitude.

From the employment with this brother he left Lynn, and started for the "Great West" to seek his fortune. At this time his brother Sylvester Henry Haines had lived at Galena about two years, the place at that time having a population of about two thousand. It was regarded as a good business point, so he purposed to go there. This was when a journey from the Atlantic to the Mississippi was long in time as well as distance. The railroad ended at Worcester, Mass., then a small country village. At this point he took the four-horse stage-coach which was drawn up before the small two-story tavern, the largest in the village, for Hartford, Conn., where he embarked on the steamer Bunker Hill for New York City; and there took steamer Rochester for Albany, thence by rail to Syracuse, where he took the canal packet Rochester for Rochester; thence he went by rail to Batavia, and from that place took the stage-coach to Buffalo, where he embarked on the steamer James Madison for Chicago, which place he reached after a voyage of six days. Then he had a three-days' stage-coach ride to Galena Ill., arriving there August 13, 1839. In the winter following he built a store on lot 35, corner of Main and Washington Streets, and on the eleventh of May, 1840, at the age of twenty years, he commenced business as a merchant, his stock in trade having arrived from Boston via New Orleans. About two years after, he returned East, and was married Aug. 17, 1842, to Angeline Elizabeth Woodbury, daughter of John and Sarah (Allen) Woodbury of Lynn, Mass. Returning to Galena, he built in the following winter his house on the hill on lot 14 in block 3, between Prospect and High Streets, which he retained as his home during his life.

At the earnest solicitation of his brothers-in-law, Joseph P. and James A. Woodbury of Boston, Mass., he sold out his business, in which he had been successful for ten years, and came East. journeying via St. Louis, Cincinnati, and Pittsburg by steamer to Brownsville, Penn., thence by coach to Cumberland, Md., and thence by rail via Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia. New York, and Boston to Lynn, where they arrived Nov. 17, 1849. At that time they had one child, Andrew Woodbury, about two years of age. who died on the twenty-ninth of December following of scarlet fever.

In August, 1850, he went into the lumber business at East

Boston, in company with his brothers-in-law, Joseph P. and James A. Woodbury, and George G. Emerson, under the name of Woodbury, Haines, & Co. They occupied a wharf and steam planingmill which was the property of his brothers-in-law.

Although this business was a success, yet he was not contented in it. He constantly yearned for the "Great West," where he had first made his home; and at his request the business at East Boston was closed up, and he made arrangements to go into the wholesale dry goods and gentlemen's furnishing business in Galena, Ill. Accordingly he made arrangements to have a store built on lot 40 (No. 160 Main Street); and September 28, of the same year, he opened business in that store, where he continued to the twentyeighth of August, 1860. He had a very extensive business. for the North-west at that time, aggregating about $150,000 some years, and extending into Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Minnesota, chiefly confined to the towns contiguous to the Mississippi River and its tributaries north of Galena. At this time Galena controlled the entire business of the North-west, and it was no unusual sight to see twenty steamers at the same time along the water front loading or unloading. His business was very prosperous for eight years, or until the panic of 1857; but notwithstanding the hard times, he continued for three years longer his usual purchases and sales, endeavoring to protect and sustain his numerous customers, who were largely indebted to him. But this could not long be continued, so he closed up his business, Aug. 22, 1860. He afterwards was employed in the settling of a large estate, which included the Lead Smelting business. He was Treasurer of the city of Galena for three years.

While pressed with a multitude of business cares he found time to gratify his taste for genealogical research, and held wide correspondence on that subject, both in this country and in England, and succeeded in gathering many facts in relation to his ancestors, and publishing some interesting papers. On Feb. 7, 1866, he was elected Corresponding member of the New England Historic and Genealogical Society at Boston Mass.; and on April 20, 1869, was chosen a Corresponding member of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, at Madison. He continued his genealogical research until within a few years of his death, and was compelled to abandon it because of impaired vision, which so progressed as to render him totally blind for the last few years of his life. Under the providence of God he had enjoyed remarkably good health, having been obliged to leave his business because of sickness, with but one exception, when he was confined to his home for six days by rheumatism.

He and his wife were admitted upon profession of faith to the membership of the First Presbyterian Church of Galena, in 1844, and four years later he was elected and ordained as one of the deacons of that church. In that church all of his children were baptized

His wife is the sixth in lineal descent from John and Agnes Woodbury, who came from England in 1624 to Cape Ann, from whence they removed to Salem in 1628. Her father, John Woodbury, was a first cousin of Mary Woodbury the mother of Hon. Levi Woodbury, Judge of the U.S. Supreme Court, Secretary of U.S. Treasury, and Secretary U.S. Navy.

It is written of him: "Andrew Mack Haines was a remarkable man in many respects. He was known and respected by every one in the community for his honesty and loyalty to his friends. He was a man of fine principles and first-rate business capacity, upright and straightforward in his dealings. He was an ideal citizen, a conscientious Christian, a devoted husband and father, and leaves many true friends to mourn his death. He was always a great reader and a student until his eyesight failed him and he became totally blind. He had a severe attack of paralysis, which caused him to suffer for several days, but the end came peacefully and quietly as a sweet sleep, which alas, will know no waking this side of the grave." He died Nov. 10, at seven o'clock P.M., 1898.

The record of his family is found under No. 147 * of this book.

* The figures in bold type refer to the family number.

JOHN CUMMINGS HAYNES.

JOHN CUMMINGS HAVNES, publisher of music, is the son of John Dearborn and Eliza Walker (Stevens) Haynes, and was born in Brighton, now a part of Boston, Sept. 9, 1829. The paternal ancestor, a thrifty farmer, came to America from Westbury, Wiltshire, England, in 1635, and settled at Strawberry Bank, afterwards called Portsmouth, N.H., and in that part of the town which is now Greenland, where he gained prominence among the leading colonists, and took active part in organizing the First Congregational church, of which he became one of the deacons. On the maternal side, Mr. Haynes is of Scotch-Irish lineage, of the Gilpatrick family. Many descendants of this excellent and thrifty stock are yet living at Biddeford, Me., where the first settlement of the family was made.

John C. Haynes received his education in the public schools of Boston, Mass., finally entering the English High School, from which he withdrew at the age of fifteen, his parents being in need of his youthful and energetic assistance. In July, 1845, he entered the employment of the late Oliver Ditson, the widely known music publisher, who, upon Jan. 1, 1851, six years later, gave him an interest in the business. On Jan. 1, 1857, Mr. Haynes became a partner, the house assuming the firm name of Oliver Ditson & Co. During his active membership in the firm, Mr. Havnes brought to it quick intuition, ability and force of character, which qualities have been invaluable in the development of one of the great industries of this country. The death of the founder of the business, Oliver Ditson, in December, 1888, led to the formation of a corporation consisting of the remaining partners of the firm, Mr. Havnes and Charles H. Ditson, son of Oliver Ditson, and the executors of the Ditson estate. Several of the best of the young men who had grown up in the business were also, through the influence of Mr. Haynes, admitted as stockholders. The corporation was organized under the laws of Massachusetts, as the Oliver Ditson Company, Mr. Haynes being its president. Headquarters are occupied in the large building No. 451 Washington Street, Boston, and branch houses are maintained as follows: John C. Haynes & Co., Boston; Charles H. Ditson & Co., New York; and J. E. Ditson & Co., Philadelphia.

The growth of this mammoth publishing house has been coincident with the progress of musical taste, culture, and education in the United States, while its influence on the promotion of these refining factors can scarcely be estimated. The large and valuable house of the New York City branch, corner of Broadway and Eighteenth Street, was erected under Mr. Haynes's direction; and their building in Philadelphia, at No. 1228 Chestnut Street, was purchased and reconstructed by him.

Mr. Haynes's large and successful real-estate ventures have placed him in possession of many valuable properties, which materially add to the assessed valuation of Boston. His self elevation to prominence among the leading business men and financiers of the renowned old city, is an example for all young men who are struggling for a foothold in life. Beginning in the humblest manner as an errand boy, he secured his employer's confidence by unremitting energy and attention to the business, and by making himself invaluable in the furtherance of that gentleman's interests, rose step by step to higher positions. When he began his career, the business was yet in its infancy. He is now one of the fathers of the great music publishing business in the United States.

A contemporary says of Mr. Haynes: "He is a rare judge of character; and this is especially evident when one looks at the men whom he has placed in charge of his many adventures. He selects with a discriminating and almost unerring eye, and throws the entire responsibility of labor upon the person selected. This places men upon their mettle; and while they feel that their chief has an eye upon their work, they also know that he never interferes in a finicky manner with what they have in charge. He has so much to attend to in looking after results, that he is forced to leave details to subordinates. The love which his employees bear him is proof of the cordial respect and esteem which he has created among those who surround him in various capacities. Personally Mr. Haynes is one of the most genial and approachable of men. He is ever ready to listen when appealed to, and his sure and ripe judgment never fails to solve a proposition placed before him."

When a young man Mr. Haynes assisted in organizing The Franklin Library Association; and his part in its debates and literary exercises for many years was of great advantage to him in his early training and culture. He is a life-member of The Mercantile Library Association, The Young Men's Christian Union, The Woman's Industrial Union, and The Aged Couples' Home Society. He also is one of the trustees of the Franklin Savings Bank, a director in The Massachusetts Title Insurance Co., and a vice-president and director of The Massachusetts Homeopathie Hospital. He was for many years treasurer, and is now a director of The Free Religious Association of the United States. The Massachusetts Club, the Home Market Club, and the Boston Merchants' Association claim him as a member.

He is President of The Music Publishers' Association of the United States, which has been in existence about thirty-five years, and during all this time he has been an active and influential member.

In religious, social, political, and scientific subjects, Mr. Haynes has always displayed a lively interest. For many years he has been President of The Parker Memorial Science Class, which holds its sessions every Sunday during eight months of the year. In early life, after having been a pupil in one of Boston's Baptist Sunday schools, he became interested, in 1848, in the preaching of Rev. Theodore Parker. About two years previous the Twentyeighth Congregational Society was organized "to give Theodore Parker a chance to be heard in Boston." Mr. Havnes served for many years as chairman of its standing committee, and took an active part in later years in the construction of the Parker Memorial Building, and was largely instrumental in its transfer to "The Benevolent Fraternity of Churches in Boston," the object of this transfer being to perpetuate the memory of Theodore Parker in charitable, educational, and religious works. He was one of the organizers of the Parker Fraternity of Boston, which was for many years a powerful social and religious society. The Parker Fraternity Course of lectures initiated by this society, because of the exclusion of Mr. Parker from the lecture platform of Boston, were sustained for nearly twenty years, and were conspicuous for their influence in molding and directing public opinion, especially during the War of the Rebellion and the years of reconstruction immediately following. In the first course, in 1858, Mr. Parker delivered his celebrated lectures on Washington, Franklin, Adams, and Jefferson.

In late years Mr. Haynes has been connected with the Church of the Unity, of which Rev. Minot J. Savage was the minister, and with the South Congregational Society, of which Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D.D., is the minister.

Mr. Haynes joined the Free Soil party when a young man, casting his first Presidential vote in 1852 for John P. Hale. Following his party into the Republican ranks, he is still identified with it. He was a member of the Boston Common Council during four important years, 1862–1865, and during that time made strenuous efforts to further such plans and incidental legislation as should enable Boston to furnish its quota of volunteer soldiers for the suppression of the Rebellion. Mr. Haynes also refers with justifiable pride to his strenuous advocacy of a measure which shortly became successful, to secure the opening of the Public Library on Sundays. Since then he has been often solicited to accept public office, but has declined. He is a generous patron of many of Boston's charitable, educational, and business associations.

Mr. Haynes is a man of strong physique, alert mind, fine character, and refined tastes. His influence in promoting musical culture throughout the country, as well as in developing the business of the great publishing house, is inestimable.

In May, 1855, Mr. Haynes was united in marriage to Fanny, daughter of the Rev. Charles and Frances Seabury Spear. Theodore Parker performed the marriage ceremony. Of this union were seven children, whose record appears under number 231 of this book.

JAMES GILSON HAYNES.

JAMES GILSON HAVNES, SON of John Dearborn and Eliza Walker (Stevens) Haynes, was born on Milk Street, Boston, Mass., Dec. 7, 1830. He received his education in the public schools of Boston; and at the age of thirteen years, being desirous of earning his own living, he left school and entered the employ of Nathaniel Waterman, as an apprentice to the trade of tinsmith. His employer was the largest dealer in kitchen furniture in the city. While learning his trade he began to feel the need of an advanced education, and attended an evening school. He also joined the Mechanics' Apprentices Library Association, and became an active member, serving at one time as president. He derived great benefit from its literary and other advantages; and he kept in touch with it for many years, and attended its last annual festival, Feb. 22, 1894. After leaving Mr. Waterman he went into business for himself, April 1, 1855, starting in a small way on the corner of Harrison Avenue and Indiana Street. His business steadily increased, until he was hard pressed for room; and wishing to extend it into other departments, he moved to 260 Harrison Avenue, where he opened a large house-furnishing goods store, and for thirty years or more conducted one of the largest retail stores of the kind in Boston. He was also for many years an efficient member of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics Association, and its president during 1888-89-90. He was superintendent of its two triennial fairs in 1887 and 1890, and under his skillful management these were made the most successful of any in the history of the Association. He was principally instrumental in placing the Association on a sound financial basis. In appreciation of what he did, the Association soon after his death made record as follows: "All who came in contact with him well know how earnestly, faithfully, and conscientiously he carried out all his plans for the benefit of this Association. In addition to these duties, he was frequently on committees requiring much time, thorough consideration, and sound judgment. It would perhaps be impossible to name a member who in recent years has given more service to our Association, whether measured in hours or in results of prolific good to us, than Mr. Haynes. But if he labored for our benefit 'without money and without price,' he will not go unrewarded."

Mr. Haynes was a man of keen intellect, progressive in his ideas, and courageous in the expression of his opinions. He was well informed, and tenacious of his beliefs, but charitably inclined to those who held contrary opinions. In his business affairs he was shrewd, methodical, watching carefully the details: a good organizer, an exceptional manager. On Feb. 13, 1859, he married Charlotte A. Folger, daughter of one of the famous sea-captains of Nantucket, Mass. The record of his family is found at number 232 of this book.

He was connected with the Masonic Order, and the Sons of Temperance, and, with his brother, John C., was one of the band of young men men who rallied around and helped sustain Rev. Theodore Parker in his preaching. He was a life-long Unitarian. For many months he was a great sufferer, confined to his home at the Highlands; and when so far recovered, as it was thought, to be able to endure the strain of travel, he left for the South to spend the winter months in a more congenial climate. He died at Aiken, S.C., on the twenty-ninth day of December, 1894.

MARTIN ALONZO HAYNES.

MARTIN ALONZO HAYNES, SON of Elbridge G. and Caroline R. (Knowlton) Haynes, was born in Springfield, N.H., during the period when his father owned and lived upon a farm in that town. His parents not long afterwards moved to Manchester, where he was educated in the public schools of the city, graduating from the High School, after which he learned the printer's trade. When the War of the Rebellion broke out, at the age of nineteen, he responded to the first call for troops, enlisting in April, 1861, in the Abbott Guard of Manchester. This was the first company to go into camp at Concord for the First N.H. Regiment, and which eventually became Company I of the Second N. H. Regiment. On the morning when the Regiment started from Washington on the Bull Run campaign, Mr. Haynes was ordered to remain behind in charge of the "salt-horse" and hardtack. This was a condition which he did not relish; so he threw up his position as Commissary Clerk, and demanded his musket, and took his place in the ranks, where he served for over three years, refusing promotion and tenders of commission. His regiment passed through the many vicissitudes of war, engaging in some of the severest battles, and losing large numbers of officers and privates; but Mr. Haynes never shrank from duty or danger, and was mustered out of service, June 21, 1864. He was then employed for a time on the editorial staff of the Manchester Daily Union. After that he was Clerk and Paymaster for the Rockingham Mills in Portsmouth. In January, 1868, he removed to Lake Village, now a part of the city of Laconia, making his permanent residence there, and commenced the publication of the Lake Village Times newspaper, which he ably edited. He was honored by the town of Guilford, in which the village was situated, by being twice chosen as representative to the New Hampshire Legislature. He was appointed on the staff of Governor B. F. Prescott, with rank of Colonel. For seven years he was Clerk of the Courts for Belknap County, resigning in 1881, that he might take a seat in the National Congress as Representative from the First New Hampshire District. He served in the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses with honor to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. He was appointed Internal Revenue Agent under President Harrison, and afterwards under President McKinley, which office he continues to hold, and has now gone to the Philippines to establish the Internal Revenue system there. He was Department Commander of the G.A.R. for two terms; also for two terms he was President of the New Hampshire Veterans Association, which through his instrumentality was lifted out of debt, and which he left with its unique and splendid equipment for the annual reunions at The Weirs.

He was married March 9, 1863, to Cornelia T. Lane; and the record of his family is found under number 289 of this book.

JOSEPH L. HAINES.

JOSEPH L. HAINES, son of Lewis and Julia (Bryant) Haines, was born Oct. 24, 1835, in the village of Damariscotta Mills, Me. His father died when he was five years old, leaving his mother with four daughters and one son, he being the youngest. He received his education at the district schools of the place, and at Lincoln Academy, New Castle, Me.

When sixteen years of age, while attending the Academy, he called upon his uncle Nathaniel Bryant one noon, and in course of conversation decided to hire the saw- and grist-mill owned by his uncle. He went back to the schoolroom, took his books, and, as he afterwards said, "took a bee-line for home." He immediately entered upon his work at the mills, and ran them day and night with good success. After three years he started a general store in the place, which he continued, in connection with other branches of business, until his death. He commenced the smelt fisheries in the place, buying all that were caught, and selling them in Boston and New York markets. He was the first man to buy the surplus, over the home market, of the alewife fish privilege owned by the two towns of Nobleboro and New Castle. When twenty-three years of age he built the ship Cochief, the last one built at Damariscotta Mills, which he loaded with oak lumber and sent to California, finding there a good market, and doing well by the transaction. He bought a large tract of land, and carried on farming quite extensively, employing many men and a large number of teams in his different branches of business. As there was no railroad at that time nearer than Bath or Gardiner, all transportation of goods was made by team. Not only was he a live business man, but he was a great reader, and much interested in military tactics. He was selectman during the War of the Rebellion, and mustered into service many soldiers, delivering them at headquarters at Portland or Augusta. Although he was a Republican in a Democratic town, yet after he was twenty-two, he was chosen to serve the town every year until his death. He represented the town for two terms in the State legislature. He was noted for his quick wit and strong sense of humor. His sympathy for the poor and unfortunate was so genuine that he was frequently appealed to by those who were in trouble. It was one of his marked traits to treat all persons with the utmost consideration. He early adopted the practice of doing with his might whatever he undertook. Being a man of noble character, he succeeded by dint of hard work on his own part, and had he lived long enough, doubtless would have made a shining mark in the world. He was married, on April 23, 1859, to Clara Smithwiels of New Castle, Me.; and he died Oct. 13, 1867. The record of his family is found under number 131 of this book.

WILLIAM T. HAINES.

WILLIAM THOMAS HAINES, SON of Thomas J. and Maria L. (Eddy) Haines, was born in Levant, Me., where he was brought up on the farm with the common opportunities of an intelligent and enterprising farmer's son. Having a thirst for knowledge, he availed himself of the best offered advantages, and fitted for college, and in 1876 graduated from the Maine State College; then from the Albany Law School in 1878. In May, the following year, Mr. Haines settled at Oakland (then West Waterville), Kennebec County, Maine, and commenced the practice of law. He remained there until October, 1880, when he removed to Waterville, where he has made his permanent home. He soon surrounded himself with a good clientage, and was very successful in his profession. In 1882 he was elected County Attorney for Kennebec County, which office he held for two terms. Being a Republican, he was active for his party during several campaigns. He was elected to the Maine Senate in 1888 and 1890, and as a legislator became prominent in putting forth many new reform measures which have proved to be highly beneficial. He is a ready and forcible debater, and makes firm friends of his associates. He has shown his interest in educational matters by the legislation which he secured for his alma mater, and by serving on the Board of Trustees of that institution since 1882. He was chairman of the committee, and had charge of the construction of both Coburn Hall and Wingate Hall at the State University, and has been secretary of the trustees since 1886. In 1892 Mr. Haines was candidate for Attorney. General of Maine, but was defeated at that time. But in 1896 he was triumphantly nominated and elected to that office, which position he still retains.

He has been prominent as a citizen of the city of his adoption. He organized, and with others started the Waterville Loan and Building Association, for which he is now attorney and one of the executive board of Trustees; also the Masonic Building Company, which erected a building containing one of the most spacious and beautiful Masonic lodge-rooms in the State. In 1897 he built the elegant block known as the "Haines Building." He also is a member of the Maine Sportsmen's Association, and has taken a great interest in the propagation and protection of game. But aside from these things, he has been greatly devoted to his profession, and as an attorney has enjoyed the confidence of the community, both for integrity and ability, and is regarded as one of the most brilliant of the bar in Maine. He is a man of commanding presence, a clear and forcible speaker, strongly argumentative, and a recognized power with the people. He is thoroughly devoted to his native State, and especially to the city of his adoption, believing it to be a good place to live and labor in. In 1883 he was married to Edith S. Hemmenway of Rockland, Me., and the record of his family will be found under number 269 of this book.

ASHLEY D. HAYNES.

ASHLEY DANIEL HAYNES, son of Samuel and Mary (Philbrick) Haines, was born in Deerfield, N.H., Aug. 11, 1838, and was brought up on the farm, having the usual experiences of a farmer's son. As he grew older he entertained the desire to come into wider contact with the world; so he entered upon the insurance business in Lawrence and Lowell, Mass., and, after several years, went to Iowa as traveling agent for the company. Later he returned to Massachusetts to enter the employ of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company. He was afterwards appointed general traveling agent for the Accident Insurance Company of North America, with headquarters at Albany, N.Y., with a territory embracing New England, New York, and New Jersey. In 1883 he went through the West to San Francisco and Southern California, and down through Mexico and Texas, appointing agents for the company. Later he became general traveling agent for the Masons' Accident Insurance Company, and still later was general agent for the Odd Fellows' Mutual Accident Insurance Company of Boston, Mass. After he retired from the business he went back to the old farm in Deerfield, where with single blessedness, although with kindred. he finds life enjoyable.

Mr. Haynes has a marked talent for music, being a fine singer and teacher, and has been choir-master and organist for many years, and was much interested in the Peace Jubilee held in Boston in 1869. Mr. Haynes is a Mason of high order, and was delegate to the Convention of Knights Templars held in San Francisco, Cal., in 1883. He is one of the most solid men in our branch of the Haines family, standing six feet or more, and at one time weighing three hundred and twenty-seven pounds! He has had some amusing experiences while traveling over the country. Not often was he troubled by any one's coming along and asking him if the seat was engaged. That it was engaged was too evident to people with open eyes. At one time, as he was traveling in Kansas, he had the upper berth in a sleeper, and two young ladies were to occupy the one below; but on seeing him they grew fearful, and went to the porter and wanted him to intercede and effect a change, as they were afraid that the chains of the upper berth might break, and that would be the last of them ! Perhaps there was danger of that, as some time after, in a hotel in Kansas, on a hot summer's night, when all had retired and quiet reigned, his bed went down with a tremendous crash, startling all the guests, who were at a loss to know what the matter could be, Presently there was a rap on the door, and the inquiry, "Want any help in there?" The reply was, "No, I guess not; I am on top, and I will stay there." One day while trying to enter a hack in Amsterdam, N.Y., being tall, his stove-pipe hat struck the top, and at the same time his foot slipped, and he pitched with considerable violence through the door directly into the arms of a young lady inside, who fell back and screamed, "I cannot get my breath; come one-half at a time, please!" Such is the life of a traveling man who weighs over three hundred pounds. Other record may be found under number 82 of this book.

MATTHIAS HAINES.

MATTHIAS HAINES, the sixth son of Matthias and Sarah (Hall) Haines, was born in Raymond, N.H., Dec. 30, 1786. His earlier years were spent on his father's farm, with the opportunity of attending school in the winter season, according to the custom of those times. Afterwards he was a student for a year or two at the academy in Peacham, Vt. Then he commenced the study of medicine with Dr. Shedd of that place. On completing his medical studies he entered upon the practice of his profession in the northern part of Vermont. In 1810 he attended a course of lectures at Dartmouth College, that he might be the better equipped for his profession. In 1861, in company with his twin brother Joshua, he started for the great West, riding all the way on horseback, and finally located at Rising Sun, Ind. On Oct. 22, 1822, he married Elizabeth Brower of Lawrenceburg, Ind. Sometime in the winter of 1845-46 he united with the Presbyterian church of Rising Sun, and soon after was elected an elder, and as such he frequently represented the church in the Presbytery, and also as delegate to the General Assembly. He became one of the foremost citizens of the town of his adoption, active and liberal in promoting the intellectual and religious interests of the place. He was an affable and courteous gentleman of the old school, an able and successful physician, and an earnest Christian, being one who helped lay deep the foundation of society in the then Far West. He died at Rising Sun, Jan. 21, 1863, at the age of seventy-seven years, leaving as a legacy deeds sweet in memory. The record of his family will be found under number 70 of this book.

ABRAM B. HAINES.

ABRAM BROWER HAINES, the oldest son of Matthias and Elizabeth (Brower) Haines, was born Nov. 29, 1823, at Rising Sun, Ind., where his father had early settled as a physician He received his education in Rising Sun Academy and Miami University. which he entered at the age of sixteen. He read medicine with his father, and graduated from the medical department of Western Reserve College in 1846. In April of the same year he entered upon the practice of his profession in Aurora, Ind. In the year following he was married to Julia P. Loring of Rising Sun. As a physician he earned for himself an enviable reputation by his learning, his skill, his faithfulness, and his unflagging devotion to the welfare of his patients. When the terrible scourge of cholera visited that place in 1848, he persisted in going about on his professional rounds, even when so exhausted as to require the services of an assistant to help him from his carriage; and in the sick-room he was so gentle and sympathetic as to endear him to those who were suffering. Wherever he called, he carried with him the manner and language of the Christian gentleman. In July, 1862, he received a commission from the Governor as Assistant Surgeon of the 19th Ind. Vols., First Division (known as the "Iron Brigade"), First Corps, of the Army of the Potomac. He was with the regiment continually until Lee's surrender, and was in all the great battles of the Eastern army, from Second Bull Run to Appomattox. At Second Bull Run, and again at Gettysburg he was made a prisoner. In the first case it was voluntary, as he was unwilling to leave the sick and wounded who could not be taken from the field. Following the victory at Appomattox he was appointed Surgeon of the 146th Ind. Vols., and was mustered out in September, 1865, after a service of three years and three months. Twenty years after the war he received the appointment of President of the board of Examining Surgeons of the Pension Department of South-eastern Indiana, which office he held for two years.

He was a man of strong character and incorruptible, and an earnest advocate of the best interests of the community. When he first settled in Aurora he joined the Presbyterian church, being one of the first nine members, and the last of that number to pass away. In 1848 he was ordained a ruling elder, which office he held for the remainder of his life. It is said that the secret of his success as a physician, as a soldier, and a ruler in the church was that he placed duty to God first. With him prayer was so much of a habit, that when disease had prostrated the body and obscured the mind, his thoughts expressed towards God were perfectly clear and connected. He was a noble example of a high-minded Christian physician and citizen. He died on July 20, 1887, leaving behind him an influence wide-reaching and fragrant with goodness.

The record of his family will be found under number 155 of this book.

MATTHIAS L. HAINES.

MATTHIAS LORING HAINES, son of Abram B. and Julia P. (Loring) Haines, was born at Aurora, Ill., May 4, 1850. He commenced his education in the public schools, attending at Rising Sun, while his father, a noted physician, was in the army. He afterwards entered Wabash College, and was graduated there in 1871. He then entered Union Theological Seminary, N.Y., where he graduated in 1874. He accepted a call from the Dutch Reformed Church, Astoria, L.I., then a suburb of Brooklyn, now the geographical center of Greater New York, which position he held with honor to himself, and profit to the church for eleven years, when by the First Presbyterian Church of Indianapolis, Ind., he was induced to resign his pastorate, and accept the wide field of usefulness offered him. On April 1, 1885, he commenced his labors with the church which had been so unanimous in their call, and where he has since had an exceptionally happy pastorate, and become a strong factor in the city. His hand and voice have been in every good work. He is President of the Indianapolis Benevolent Society, a member of the Board of Presbyterian Aid for Colleges and Academies, a director of Lane Theological Seminary, a trustee of Wabash College, and last year he received a large vote for the moderatorship of the Presbyterian General Assembly, the highest honor in the church. He was one of a committee of five of the Commercial Club, appointed to draw up the new park law passed by the Legislature in 1899. He has been President of the Indianapolis Literary Club, and is one of the Executive Committee of the Indianapolis University.

Dr. Haines is a man of rare ability, unusual self-poise, large common sense, keen insight, deep sympathy, doing the right thing at the right time. His congregation includes a former President of the United States, Benjamin Harrison, the Governor of the State, an ex-Cabinet Minister, and many prominent lawyers, editors, and merchants. Ex-President Harrison said of him, "I thank God for a pastor who preaches Christ crucified, and, never says a foolish thing." He is a man of marked humor, who can tell a story effectively without bordering on to what is coarse. It is written of him, "He is a gentleman, always a gentleman, under all circumstances. Nobody ever heard him say, nobody ever saw him do, a thing that was not in entire agreement with his vocation as a clergyman and high character as a man."

A few weeks after he commenced his pastorate at Indianapolis, he married Sarah L. Kouwenhoven of Astoria, N.Y.; and the record of their family will be found under number 268 of this book.

THOMAS J. HAINES.

THOMAS JEFFERSON HAINES, SON of Ebenezer and Rosamond (Johnson) Haines, was born in Portsmouth, N.H., Oct. 24, 1827. He commenced his education in the public schools of that place. In 1845 he entered the U.S. Military Academy, from which he graduated in 1849, standing fourth of a class of forty-three members. He was assigned to the artillery, and served in various camps and garrisons; was appointed Assistant Professor of Mathematics at the Military Academy; was Acting-Assistant-Adjutant-General in Florida; was Adjutant of his regiment, the 2d Artillery, and Adjutant of the Artillery School at Fort Monroe, Va., and in the early part of the War of the Rebellion served as Acting-Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Virginia. He was appointed Commissary of Subsistence, with the rank of Captain, Aug. 3, 1861; served as Chief C. S. Department, Missouri, Nov. 30, 1861, to Oct. 31, 1862; appointed an additional aide-de-camp, with rank of Colonel, July 4, 1862; served as Chief Purchasing and Supervising Commissary in the Department of the Missouri, Tennessee, and the northwest, Oct. 31, 1862, to Feb. 2, 1865, and the territory embraced between the Mississippi, and New Mexico and Utah, as far south as Louisiana, Feb. 2, 1864, to Feb. 2, 1865; was promoted Commissary with the rank of Major, Feb. 19, 1863; was Supervisory charge of affairs of the Subsistence Department in Illinois, and the Department of the Mississippi to the southern boundary of Arkansas, Feb. 2, to March 10, 1865; as Chief C. S. Mil. Div. of the Missouri, March 10, 1865; and in general charge of the Subsistence Department in the States of Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and Arkansas, and the Territories at that time of New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Nebraska, Dakota, Montana, and the Indian Territory, Dec. 5, 1865; as Chief C. S. Department South, Oct. 5, 1868; as Chief C. S. Division of the South, Dec. 11, 1872; as Purchasing and Depot C. S. at Boston, Mass., Nov. 28, 1873; as Assistant in the office of Commissary-General of Subsistence at Washington, D.C., May 22, 1875. He was brevetted

March 13, 1865, as Lieut.-Col., as Colonel, and as Brigadier-General for "faithful and meritorious services during the Rebellion."

Commissary-General of Subsistence, R. Macfeely, wrote of him, "His career as a cadet at the Military Academy, and his success in the various duties confided to him while an officer of artillery, indicated ability of the highest order

"His power to accomplish the tasks committed to him seemed to grow with the growth of the great armies that rose up in the West, and to expand as the area of their operations widened. As these armies grew and pressed forward, his responsibilities increased, until as the chief Purchasing and Supervising Commissary, his charge included the vast field of operations comprised in the Mississippi Valley from Louisiana to British America, and west to the Rocky Mountains with its hundreds of thousands of armed men.

"Tireless, clear-headed, far-seeing, he anticipated the wants of the armies everywhere, gathered supplies, and threw them forward by all available means, with such success that at all times and places the troops were bountifully provided with good and wholesome food.

". In accomplishing this, he disbursed nearly sixty millions of dollars of the public money, every cent of which was faithfully and honestly accounted for.

"He was naturally of fine physique; but the constant wear and strain of his great work during the war doubtless shortened his life, and led to the long illness that was terminated by his death.

"He was a man of the strictest integrity, and one of the most marked characteristics was his absorbing devotion to his duties, from which he never allowed anything to divert him. A man of strong convictions, he expressed them freely, and ably upheld them. He was equally strong in his friendships, and most beloved by those who knew him best."

On Oct. 20, 1857, he married Anne H. Cargile, when he was at the age of thirty years. The record of his family will be found under number 163 of this book.

DANIEL P. HAYNES.

DANIEL PUTNAM HANNES, son of Jonathan and Anna C. (Haviland) Haynes, was born in Walden, Vt., Aug. 29, 1841, and lived on the farm until he was twenty-seven years of age, with the exception of one year when he was serving as private in the First Vermont Cavalry, Gen. Custer being the division commander. He participated in the Battle of Cedar Creek, and in the fights which occurred in the Shenandoah, which resulted in the final expulsion of Gen. Early and his command from that valley. He also, a few days later, was in the Battle of Two Forks, in an engagement with the rear-guard of Gen. Lee's retreating army, which engagement lasted about eight hours; and he was in the last cavalry charge of the war, which occurred on the morning of Lee's surrender, and which was preceded on the previous evening by a brisk encounter with Gen. Gordon's command, which constituted the right wing of Gen. Lee's army.

A few days after he was twenty-one, his father died, and he was left in charge of the farm, and remained at home until after the death of his mother, in 1868. He then rented the farm and got employment in Lawrence, Mass., working for several months in the Washington Mills, and later changed to the Pacific Mills, where he was employed as a slasher-tender.

He commenced his education in the district schools of his native place, which constituted his educational advantages until he was sixteen, with the exception of fourteen weeks at a select school, and six months at an academy, at which time he was fitted in all except Greek and Latin to enter college. When he left his place of employment in Lawrence he entered the Chandler Scientific Department of Dartmouth College, from which he graduated as B.S. in 1880, and had won the distinction of leading his class in scholarship during the last two years of his course. During the next four years he was employed as chemist and inspector of materials by a paper manufacturing company in Holyoke, Mass. In 1884 he went to the Pacific coast, and engaged in teaching, and for three years was associate principal and half-owner of the Oakland Academy, Cal. Subsequently he taught two years and a half in Field Seminary, a young ladies' boarding-school in the same city; then for a few months he was in the Stockton High School, going from there to Portland, Ore., where for more than eight years he has taught physics in the High School of that eity. He is an officer and class-leader in the Grace M. E. Church, Portland. He never aspired for political honors, but was a Republican until 1884, when he joined the Prohibition ranks, to which he still adheres.

On Feb. 21, 1872, when at Lawrence, Mass., he married Martha L. Butler of Auburn, Me.; and the record of his family will be found under number 274 of this book.

HENRY HARRISON HAYNES.

HENRY HARRISON HAYNES was a native of Alexandria, N.H., and in early life was carefully trained by pious parents. After attending the public schools he prepared for college at Tilton Seminary in the class of 1868. He graduated from Harvard College in 1873, and four years later from the Episcopal Theological School, receiving the degree of B.D. In 1887 he received the degree of A.M. from Harvard University, and from the same institution the degree of Ph.D. in 1899 in the department of Semitic Languages and History. He was ordained to the deaconate in the Protestant Episcopal Church in Cambridge, Mass., June 20, 1877, and to the priesthood in Tilton, N.H., March 14, 1878, the sermon being preached by the Rev. Phillips Brooks. He served as Rector and Minister at Tilton in 1877-78, also at Trinity Memorial Church, Denver, Col., from 1878-80, and was Principal of Janis Hall School for boys in Denver from 1878-82. He was at Fort Collins, Col., in 1882-83, and again at Tilton, N.H., in 1883 and 1884. Then he was Assistant Minister at St. Paul's Church, Boston, Mass., in 1884 and 1885 He served the Episcopal Church at Littleton, N.H., in 1885 and 1886 He was at St. Peter's Church, Cambridge, Mass., The larger part of the following ten years he spent from 1889–90. in study, being at Cambridge, one year at Johns Hopkins University, and two years in the University at Berlin, Germany. He taught as Professor of Old Testament Language and Literature in the Church Divinity School of the Pacific at San Mateo, California, in 1899 and 1900, and at the same time was Instructor in Semitic Language and Literature in the Leland Stanford, Jr., University, Palo Alto, California. Since then he has been Instructor in the Semitic Department, Harvard University, holding high rank as a scholar and teacher, being a man of many virtues and lofty aims. Further record may be found of him under number 149 of this book.

JOSIAH MANCHESTER HAYNES.

J. MANCHESTER HAYNES of Augusta was born in Waterville, Maine, on the 12th day of May, 1839. The childhood of Mr. Haynes was passed almost entirely in Waterville. When about ten years of age his father removed from the village to a farm about two miles distant; and during the following six years Mr. Haines's time was employed in laboring on the farm in summer, and attending school at Waterville Academy in the winter-In his seventeenth year he entered Waterville College (now Colby College), and graduated in 1860. He took his degree with the reputation of a first-class scholar and writer, and a young man of superior intellectual capacity.

Immediately after leaving college, Mr. Haynes became principal of Lincoln Academy, in New Castle, Maine, and occupied that position until 1863, when he became a student in the law-office of Hawkins & Cothren, on Wall Street, in New York City. There he pursued his legal studies until 1865, when he was admitted to practice at the New York bar. Possessed of great intellectual vigor and a keen and discriminating mind, with quick perceptions, and a comprehensive grasp, and having already acquired the habit of ready and graceful extemporaneous speaking, it is but just to say that if Mr. Haines had applied himself to the practice of law, and been constant to this "most jealous mistress," he would have easily gained a commanding position, and ultimately achieved great eminence at the bar. But the prospect afforded by the legal practitioner's early experience is less alluring than the more immediate advantages of large and successful business enterprises. Accordingly, in 1866, Mr. Haines returned to Maine, and formed business connections for the purpose of dealing in, and operating upon, timber lands, and manufacturing lumber. In 1867 he established his residence in Augusta; and from that time until 1876 he devoted himself exclusively and assiduously to his business, occupying the position of Treasurer and President of the Kennebec Land and Lumber Company. But as might be expected, the people had by this time recognized his qualifications for public as well as private business; and he was that year elected, on the nomination of the Republican party, to represent the city of Augusta in the Legislature. This was a legislature of more than ordinary ability. It comprised some of the ablest lawyers and most experienced legislators and debaters in the State. Mr. Haynes participated in all important debates; and in the discussion on the Usury Bill he gave such an exhaustive exposition of the principles of political economy and the laws of supply and demand applicable to the question, that he came per saltum to the very front rank of able debaters and wise legislators. He was re-elected in 1877, and was recognized on all sides as one of the leading and most influential members of the House. The next year he was elected to the State Senate, and there took the same relative position which he had occupied in the House. In the debate on a famous contested-election case Mr. Haynes made one of the most powerful and eloquent speeches in behalf of constitutional suffrage ever heard in the legislative halls of Maine.

In 1879 he was returned to the Senate, and chosen President of that body. This was a revolutionary period in the political history of the State. The election had resulted in no choice of Governor by the people; and by reason of the complex political situation it seemed not improbable that the President of the Senate would be required for a time to exercise the office of Governor. The selection of Mr. Haynes for this responsible post at such a juncture was therefore especially complimentary. Thoughtful and judicious men of all parties looked to the Senate, as the conservative branch of the Legislature, for the orderly continuance of the government under the Constitution. But all apprehensions were at once allayed by the unequivocal and statesmanlike utterances which characterized the eloquent address of Mr. Haynes on assuming the presidential chair. "This year," he said, the "introduction of a new theory of public policy has so far further divided the people, that a new and unusual duty under the Constitution is imposed on this Legislature. It is to be hoped that in so far as this branch shares in this responsibility, its action will be so prompt and decisive, its devotion to principle so unwavering, as to afford at once a test of the strength of the Constitution and our reverence for it." Mr. Haynes had acquired entire familiarity with parliamentary law by previous legislative experience; and having a fine figure, with elegant address and manly bearing, he made one of the most accomplished presiding officers the Senate had known for many years.

In 1882 he was again elected Representative to the Legislature from Augusta, and was readily chosen Speaker of that body. In this position he exhibited the same distinguished qualifications as a presiding officer which were observable in the Senate. In the debate on the Congressional apportionment, he came down from the chair and electrified the House by the eloquence and power of his speech in support of the bill as reported by the committee.

In addition to his legislative honors, Mr. Haynes also occupied the position of Colonel and Aide-de-camp in 1871–72, and Inspector-General in 1873, on Governor Perham's staff. He has always been an unwavering supporter of the principles of the Republican party. He was a delegate to the Republican Convention of 1884, which nominated Blaine and Logan, serving on the Committee on Credentials. He was appointed one of the committee to inform the candidates of their nomination, and was made a member of the National Republican Committee of Maine for the ensuing eight years. At the meeting of the National Committee he was selected as one of the Executive Committee to have charge of the campaign.

In the meantime Mr. Haynes had not neglected his business interests, but was achieving success in all of his enterprises. He has now become one of the most extensive manufacturers of lumber and owners of timber-lands in the State; has been largely engaged in ship-building; was President of the Haynes and De Witt Ice Company, a corporation dealing very extensively in ice on the Kennebec River, and having branch houses in several large cities in the Union; is also one of the directors of the Edwards Manufacturing Company, a corporation now operating the cottonmills at Augusta.

Mr. Haynes was one of the organizers of the Edwards Manufacturing Company, whose mills in Augusta have been developed and extended until they are a model of profitable cotton manufacture. He also early saw the possibilities of electric traction, and, with others, built the Augusta, Hallowell, and Gardiner Street Railway, the Thomaston and Camden Street Railway, the Bangor and Old-Town Street Railway, the Paris and Norway Street Railway, besides being interested in other similar enterprises in the West. He is President of the Augusta, Hallowell, and Gardiner Street Railway, and a director in his other electrical enterprises. He has been interested in electric and gas illuminating properties in Augusta, Rockland, and several cities in the West, and is now engaged in construction of inter-urban roads in more than one of the Western States. In 1894 he organized the Augusta Trust Company, of which he is President, which has had great success in the financial world, having become a powerful member of the banking institutions of the State. He is a director in the Eastern Steamship Company, which comprises nearly all of the steamer lines plying from the coast of Maine.

Thus by his marked ability and unquestioned integrity Mr. Haynes has already won a position among the foremost of the business operators and public men of Maine; and it is but a just and logical inference from the history of the past, that still higher honors await him in the future.

As a citizen of Augusta, Mr. Haynes has always been vigilant in promoting the interests of his fellow-citizens with reference to all public enterprises and internal improvements; ready and generous with money and service whenever properly required. Much of the fair appearance of the city of Augusta is due to the taste and energy of his administration of its affairs while he was mayor of the city, to which office he was chosen in 1898. In business dealings he is uniformly courteous, but quick to apprehend, and prompt and efficient to act.

In the midst of his public duties and business cares, however, he has never forgotten or neglected the arts which contribute to the amenities of life, and tend to elevate its dignity and enlarge its enjoyment. His literary culture is of a superior order, and he has found time to indulge his classical tastes and gratify his love of art by many tours of observation in Europe. He has been a careful reader of history and general literature, and few are better informed in regard to the progress of society and the current events of the world.

In social life he does not "wear his heart upon his sleeve for daws to peek at," and resorts to none of the measures of the demagogue to win popular favor; but with agreeably discursive faculties and great facility of expression, he is an elegant conversationist, and a delightful companion among Congenial friends.

He has been invited to deliver the oration at the centennial celebration at Waterville, his native town, June 23, 1902. The record of his family may be found under number 302 of this book.

NATHANIEL HAYNES

WAS the eldest son of Rev. John and Lydia (Coffin) Haynes, and born in Hebron, Me., March 11, 1799, where his father was settled as pastor of the Baptist church in that place. He had a thirst for knowledge, and worked his way through Bowdoin College, graduating in 1823 in the same class with Senator William Pitt Fessenden, William G. Crosby (afterwards Governor of Maine), and Luther V. Bell, who became a physician, and was the distinguished Superintendent of the McLean Asylum for the Insane. After graduating, Mr. Haynes became the Principal of the Gardiner Lyceum, and while thus employed he translated from the French, and published, with improvements, a treatise on Arithmetic. At the same time he earried on legal studies in the office of his kinsman, Hon. George Evans; and on being admitted to the bar, in 1826, he established himself in practice at Oldtown, Me. Soon afterwards he removed to Bangor, where he made his permanent home. Being in feeble health he abandoned the law, and became editor and proprietor of The Eastern Republican. During the stormy period which preceded the election of Andrew Jackson to the Presidency of the nation, his abilities as a political writer made themselves widely known. His published irony and keen satire were equally admired and dreaded, and his newspaper was regarded as one of the most efficient supporters of the Democratic party in New England. Convinced of the truth and of the importance of the political opinions he had formed, he battled for them manfully; seeking no other reward for his labors than the consciousness of having contributed to the best of his ability to their establishment, he declined to become a candidate for any political office. His sole ambition was to impress his own views of public policy upon the common mind, and to exert upon the statesmen of his country that influence to which his abilities entitled him.

For many years Mr. Haynes suffered almost constantly from a severe asthmatic affection. It was a source of wonder to his friends that he could accomplish so much, liable as he was at any moment to be stricken down by disease. His severe physical sufferings were unable to repress his mental energies, and his ablest political articles were often composed while he was enduring tortures such as can only be appreciated by those who have experienced them. In the hope of alleviating his sufferings he passed the winter of 1833-34 in Cuba, and employed his leisure in studying the history, the resources, and the condition of the island. The results of these investigations he embodied in an entertaining series of letters to his paper. He returned with health partially improved, but on resuming his former habits of application his troubles assumed a more alarming form. In the autumn of 1835 he traveled by land to New Orleans, and then sailed for Europe, where he visited England, France, and Belgium. But it was of no avail. He returned in the following summer in confirmed pulmonary consumption. from which he died Dec. 6, 1836. Mr. Haynes's writings, though all intended for the ephemeral columns of a newspaper, were characterized by great strength and perspicuity of thought, and by simplicity and gracefulness of style. He was a constant student of the best literature of his own language, as well as of the French, in which he was proficient; also of the ancient classic authors. То the last he found in these a constant source of alleviation from his sufferings. He loved the seclusion of his library; but he knew how to mingle with men, and he well understood the springs and motives of human action. Under all circumstances he showed himself a high-minded, honorable man, whose integrity was raised above the shadow of suspicion. The record of his family may be found under number 217 of this book.

HENRY WILLIAMSON HAYNES.

HENRY WILLIAMSON HAYNES, the eighth in lineal descent from Deacon Samuel Haines, was born in Bangor, Me., Sept. 20, 1831, being the eldest son of Nathaniel Haynes and Caroline Jemima Williamson, daughter of Hon. William Durkee Williamson of Bangor, Me., the first Governor, and the Historian of Maine. After his father's death, when he was only five years old, his mother returned with him to her father's home. For a few years he attended the Grammar and High schools of his native city, beginning also under his grandfather's instruction the study of Latin. Among the many books with which he was surrounded he early acquired a fondness for reading. His mother, having married as her second husband Mr. John Chapman, a merchant of Boston, Henry's home was transferred in his tenth year to that eity. In the autumn of 1842 he entered the Boston Latin School; and after completing the full five years' course at this famous school, under Mr. Epes S. Dixwell, the head master, he graduated with the highest honors. He entered Harvard College in 1847, and graduated in 1851, fourth in his class. At that time he was elected secretary of his class for life. For two years after graduation he was assistant teacher in the Private Latin School which had just been established by his former instructor, Mr. Dixwell. After this he began the study of law at Concord, N.H., in the office of Hon. Ira Perley, a former chief justice of that State. After a year thus occupied, he entered the Harvard Law School, but soon left to become private tutor to young Ebenezer Francis Thaver, son of Mr. John E. Thayer, a banker of Boston; in the meantime continuing his law studies in the law-office of Hon, William Bingham. The summer of 1855 was passed with his pupil in Europe, traveling in England and on the Continent. On his return he concluded his studies in the same office, and was admitted to the bar in Boston upon examination, Sept. 26, 1856. After having practiced his profession for a couple of years, he sailed the second time for England, April 14, 1858, with his former pupil, Thayer, who had entered Harvard College, but had fallen ill and required a change of climate. The young man died suddenly of apoplexy at Avignon, France, and Mr. Haynes immediately returned home. The following year he received from his alma mater the degree of A.M. For a few years he continued in the practice of his profession, and in 1857 was chosen a member of the School Committee of Boston for three years, and again in 1862 for a similar term. In 1858 he was elected to the Common Council of Boston, and was selected by them as their representative upon the Board of Trustees of the Boston Public Library for the year 1858-59. For the third time he had occasion to go abroad upon a matter of business, and was absent from June 29, 1864, to the end of the following October. In the meantime the Civil War had broken out, and the Independent Corps of Cadets of Boston, which venerable organization he had joined in October, 1856, was ordered into the service of the United States at Fort Warren, in Boston Harbor, on May 26, 1862. In this service he continued until mustered out, July 2d of the same year. In the summer of 1867 he resigned from the company. But the war had interfered with his law practice, so that he concluded to abandon that profession and to devote his time thenceforward to teaching the ancient languages, for which vocation he had always felt a strong inclination, and in which he had had a successful experience.

Having been elected Professor of Latin at the University of Vermont, he sailed for Europe for the fourth time, and was married at the American Legation in Paris, Aug. 1, 1867, to Helen Weld, daughter of Mr. John A. Blanchard, a merchant of Boston. He returned home, and immediately entered upon the duties of his profession at Burlington, Vt. In 1870 he was made Professor of Greek, and Librarian, but still continued to teach classes in Latin, as before. Family reasons caused him to resign his office; and for the fifth time he sailed for Europe, on March 29, 1873, with the intention of pursuing an extended course of study in ancient classical art and antiquities, and in prehistoric archaeology. His plan involved a residence abroad of several years, and travel in many countries. In the latter part of June he began his studies in prehistoric archaeology at Salisbury, England, under the practical instruction of Mr. E. T. Stevens, curator of the Blackmore Museum in that city, and author of "Flint Chips," a valuable manual of prehistoric science. From Salisbury he visited Stonehenge and other interesting antiquarian localities in the neighborhood. He attended the annual meeting of the Royal Institute of Archaeology at Exeter, from July 29 to Aug. 4, and accompanied the society in excursions to Dartmoor and elsewhere. From there he visited Mr. Pengelly at Torquay, and under his direction studied the excavations that had long been going on at the celebrated cavern of Kent's Hole. From Aug. 21 to Oct. 11 he traveled on the Continent, and on his return to London studied during the remainder of the year in the collections of the British Museum and other institutions, visiting several prehistoric sites. On Jan. 30, 1874, he started for Rome, where he remained until April 30, studying in the museums and galleries. He then traveled through the various Italian cities, and in Switzerland, where he studied the collections of Lake-Dwellers' relics. From there he journeyed to Stockholm, Sweden, to attend the Congrès International d'Anthropologie et d'Archéologie Préhistoriques, where he made the acquaintance of the leading students in those sciences in Europe. On his way back he visited a coast station of the Stone Age, in southern Sweden, and the famous "kitchen-midden" of Meilgaard, in Denmark, with other sites of early man's habitation. Returning to Paris he studied in the collections of that city, and at the Museum of St. Germain-en-Lave, and visited his friend Professor Desor, at Neuchâtel, in Switzerland, whom he had known in Cambridge, Mass. Through him he was enabled to make explorations in a lake-dwelling on the Lake of Bienne, which had just been exposed to view through the drainage operations intended to control the malarial conditions of that region. After that he visited the celebrated station of Acheul, near Amiens, and personally obtained paleolithic implements from the gravel beds there. From Nov. 6 to May 7 he worked in Rome, Naples, and Pompeii. Returning to Florence he remained until July 9, when he left for Aix-les-Bains, where he dredged for implements of the Brenze Age in Lake Bourget, and visited the Pass of the Mt. du Chat by which Hannibal crossed the Alps. On July 19 he left for Nancy, France, to attend a session of the Congrès International des Américanistes, where, as the representative of the United States, he was called to the chair on the third day of the session. He then traveled from Aug. 3 to Oct. 11 through Brittany and Normandy, visiting Carnae and numerous other sites famous for dolmens and menhirs, and also the Vitrified Camp of Peran, near St. Brieue, and a vast prehistoric earthwork near Dieppe. Returning to Paris he spent much time in searching for fossil bones and flint implements which accompanied them, in gravel pits on the banks of the Seine.

$\begin{array}{c} HAINES \\ HAYNES \end{array} GENEALOGY. \end{array}$

The winter of 1876 was spent in the cities of Germany, studying in the various museums. He then returned to Italy, and visited the celebrated Red Rock caves near Mentone, where he procured numerous relics from the débris. On March 14, 1876, he reached Rome, where he remained until June 4, spending much time in searching for fossil bones and flints in the gravel pits of the Tiber. Many visits were paid to Etruscan sites; and in company with Hon. George P. Marsh, United States Minister to Italy, he made a carriage tour through the old towns of the Alban Hills, and another to some of the ancient cities in the Apennines. He then left for Perugia, visiting on the way the old Etruscan Clusium (now chiasi). A fortnight was spent in Perugia studying the collections there, and in excursions in the vicinity with Professor Bellucci, hunting for flint implements. The time from July 4 to Sept. 2 was passed in Florence, Venice, and in a carriage trip through the Dolomite country. He then started for Buda-Pesth, to attend again an International Prehistoric Congress, on which occasion excursions were made down the Danube to several ancient sites, and excavations were conducted in some cemeteries of the Early Iron Age. After a visit to the Salzkammerut, he returned to Florence, stopping at Vienna, Munich, and cities of North Italy, and remained there till Jan. 31, 1877, when he left for Rome. On April 9 he started for Athens by the way of Naples, Brindisi, and Corfu, and remained in Athens until May 18, studying carefully the antiquities of that city, and finding obsidian relics on the slopes of the Acropolis and on the mound at Marathon. By way of Corfu he returned to Italy, and visited the Eastern cities, among them the little republic of San Marino.

After spending several weeks at Florence and Sienna, he traveled by way of Turin to Aosta. There he remained till Aug. 6, and made an excursion to the Hospice of the Great St. Bernard and the Pass of the Little St. Bernard. He then spent a week in Courmayeur, and from there he went to Switzerland, where he remained till Sept. 1. He then left for Mâcon, to visit the celebrated prehistoric site of Solutré in its vicinity, which has given the name to a type of flint implements; and on Sept. 10 he reached Paris, where he remained until Nov. 9. During this time he made a visit to the noted prehistoric station of Pressignyle-Grand, not far from Tours, and to the château of the Baron de Baye, near Epernay, Champagne, to study the remarkable neolithic collections made by him in that neighborhood. From Paris he traveled to Marseilles, stopping by the way in the cities of Provence, and studying the existing Roman remains there.

From Marseilles he sailed, Nov. 22, for Alexandria, reaching Cairo Dec. 3. On Jan. 22, 1878, he left in a steamer for a voyage up the Nile, and remained in Luxor from Feb. 6 to March There he was fortunate enough to make valuable discov-20.eries of paleolithic implements. These were subsequently placed on exhibition by him at the French Exposition of 1878, where they were discussed at a meeting of the Société d'Anthropologie de Paris, of which he was elected a foreign associate member, and was awarded a medal and diploma. Many of these objects are at present on exhibition in the National Museum at Washington, D.C.; and an account of them has been published, illustrated by excellent prints, in the tenth volume of the "Memoirs of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences." From Egypt he sailed for Malta, and then for Sicily, where he remained till May 17, visiting the principal cities of that island. He returned to Florence by Naples and Rome, and remained till July 11, when he started for Macugnaga, stopping by the way to visit the remarkable pre-Etruscan site of Marzabotto, near Bologna. After a month spent in Macugnaga, he returned to Paris, where he remained from Sept. 10 to Nov. 2; and during that time his Egyptian objects were on exhibition at the Exposition. He then returned to London, and sailed from Liverpool, arriving in New York Nov. 19, 1878, just five years and eight months from the day he left home.

Since his return Mr. Haynes has lived in Boston, devoting his time to literary and antiquarian pursuits. In 1879 he was again elected to the School Committee, to fill an unexpired term, and reelected in 1880 for three years, but resigned in the same year, upon being appointed a Trustee of the Boston Public Library. That office he continued to hold by successive reappointments until 1895, which period included the construction of the present Library building. In June, 1879, he was elected a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and was made Corresponding Secretary in April, 1896. This office he still holds. In February and March, 1880, he delivered a course of lectures before the Lowell Institute on "The Prehistoric Archaeology of Europe." In October of the same year he was elected a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and in March, 1886, was chosen Librarian, and re-elected each year until May, 1899, when he declined to serve longer. When the Archaeological Institute of America was founded, in 1879, he was made a member of the Executive Committee, and annually re-elected, having had the main charge of editing the volumes of the American series of its publications.

Mr. Haynes has lectured upon Archaeological topics in New York, Brooklyn, and Concord, N.H., and has read numerous papers before different societies of which he is a member, — the American Antiquarian Society, the Massachusetts Historical Society, the Boston Society of Natural History, the American Geographical Society, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He has also contributed a variety of reviews and other articles to the New York Nation, the American Journal of Archaeology, the American Anthropologist, the American Antiquarian, and other journals.

To the first volume of Winsor's "Narrative and Critical History of America," he furnished a chapter upon The Prehistoric Archaeology of America; and to the second, another upon Early Explorations in New Mexico. Further record may be found under number 217 of this book.

WILLIAM H. HAINES.

WILLIAM H. HAINES, the son of Jonathan B. and Catherine (Smith) Haines, was born in New Hampton, N.H., and removed to the town of New London when he was a mere boy, and remained there until 1861, when he went West and engaged in the boot and shoe business with his son, in which he was highly successful. He had all the qualities for police work, and accepted the office of City Marshal at Lancaster, Wis., and afterwards at St. Joe, Mich. It was his intention to go to Chicago and enter the police force there, but his wife dissuaded him. When he left St. Joe he was presented with a handsome gold police badge as a token of regard by the citizens. He had seen some pretty hard experiences in that place. One Sunday night in 1870, while he was Marshal, he was standing on a high bluff which overlooked a portion of the city, when he heard the cry of "Murder" coming from one of the saloons. The embankment on which he stood was about forty feet above the street, and almost perpendicular; but he did not hesitate to run down the steep incline and search out the trouble. As he entered the door of a low building he found a fight in progress between two sailors crazy with liquor. As one of the parties held in his hand a sheath-knife with a sharp blade about six inches long, he saw at a glance that it was a desperate battle; and before he could decide on the best way to get his man, the fellow discovered him and made a rush for him, waving the sharp bladed weapon before him with murder in his eve. He backed away from the mad man until his feet touched the wall, when he knew that he must act quickly. With a well-directed blow from his left arm he struck the sailor under the eve and felled him to the floor, and had him by the throat a prisoner. He afterwards discovered that the point of the knife had just caught the skin on the back of his hand, and made a wound about two inches long, but not deep. He regarded that as the tightest place he was ever in, and an experience which he would not eare to repeat.

But Mr. Haines has a war record of which any man might well feel proud. In the year 1846 he enlisted in Boston in the U. S. Navy, and was assigned to the sloop-of-war Jamestown, from which he was transferred to the frigate Cumberland. That vessel was engaged in blockading the harbor of Vera Cruz, as we were at war with Mexico. They had some sharp engagements as they ran up the river, and dislodged belligerents and captured their flags. He was at Vera Cruz when the treaty with the United States was announced, and was on the dock at the time when Santa Anna went aboard ship to leave the city.

During the War of the Rebellion he served in the 36th Wisconsin Regiment, which was in Hancock's Corps, and saw hard fighting in the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, Cold Harbor, and during the siege of Petersburg. He was wounded twice, once in the hip during the Weldon raid, and again at Ray's Farm, where he received a scalp wound.

He is a member of the G. A. R., having been a charter member of Post 6 of Delavan, Wis. For more than forty years he has been a member of the Odd Fellows. He is a man of genial spirit, great courage, strict integrity, and native tact. The record of his family may be found under number 229 of this book.

SAMUEL COLLINS BEANE.

SAMUEL COLLINS BEANE was a native of Candia, N.H., where he spent his boyhood and attended the public schools, in which he gave evidence of a desire for knowledge, which led to the purpose to obtain a liberal education. Under this inspiration he prepared for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and at "The Gymnasium," Pembroke, N.H. From there he entered Dartmouth College, and graduated (A.B.) in 1858. The gospel ministry lay before him as a field best suited to his tastes and abilities. So he entered Harvard Divinity School, and graduated in 1861. He at once was called by the First Unitarian Church in Chicopee, Mass. over which he was ordained and installed Jan. 15, 1862. His ability and success attracted the attention of the churches; and after a pastorate of about three years he was called by the Second Church in Salem, where he was installed Jan. 1, 1865, and maintained a successful ministry for twelve years. Nine days after closing his labors in Salem he was installed over the Second Congregational Church in Concord, N.H., where he won the hearts of his own people and the respect and esteem of the citizens during his seven years' pastorate. About that time the American Unitarian Association for Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont were looking for a man of energy and tact for Superintendent, and persuaded him to leave his people to take up that work. After three years of service in that wide field he resigned, and accepted a call from the First Religious Society in Newburyport, Mass., over which he was installed May 15, 1888, where he remains as their efficient and beloved pastor. In 1894 the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by Dartmouth College. He is an able preacher, tactful pastor, sympathizing friend, clear thinker, an active citizen, and a manly man. The record of his family may be found under number 31 of this book.

DANIEL P. CILLEY.

DANIEL PLUMMER CILLEY, son of Col. Daniel and Hannah (Plummer) Cilley, was born in Epsom, N.H., May 31, 1806. He was the grandson of Gen. Joseph Cilley of Revolutionary fame, and his mother was sister of Governor Plummer of Epping. He was educated at Loudon High School and Pembroke Academy, and was about to commence the study of medicine, when, becoming a Christian, he felt that he ought to preach the gospel of Christ. Accordingly, he was ordained, in 1833, as a Free Baptist minister, and preached with great success in several New Hampshire towns, the first of which was Newmarket, where he organized a Free Baptist church which has been an agent of great good in that place. He also preached at Northwood and at Somersworth, and then held an important pastorate in Manchester, from which he was called to Boston, Mass., where he remained for eight years, afterwards returning to New Hampshire and settling at Farmington in 1858.

At the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion he was granted leave of absence from his church that he might serve as chaplain of the 8th N. H. Reg. Vols. He was very faithful to his commission; and when the regiment was mustered out, he was commissioned chaplain of the 2d N. Y. Vet. Cavalry, serving till the close of the war, and was in every battle in which his regiment was engaged. After the war he was appointed missionary by the American Missionary Association, under whose support he went to North Carolina with his family, and labored there from 1868 to 1873, when, because of feeble health, resulting from his army life, he returned to live among his friends in Farmington, N.H., where he continued to make his home to the time of his death. He was very successful in the ministry, having received into the church during his life more than one thousand persons, and having given a noble uplift to many thousands. As army chaplain he was faithful to duty, and constant in meeting the wants and expectations of his comrades. He was fearless, yet sympathetic and kind, and a preacher of marked power in his denomination. He was commanding in his personal appearance, and was a Christian gentleman of the old school in every sense of the word.

In 1836 Mr. Cilley was married to Adelaide Ayers Haines of Canterbury, N.H., a lady of superior mental endowment, who in the many years of their wedded life proved a true and faithful wife, a worthy helpmeet indeed, sustaining him in his days of active service, and tenderly caring for him in his feebleness. They lived together more than fifty-two years, when he passed away at the age of eighty-two. His wife survived him about eight years. The memory of both is fragrant in the wide circle of those who knew them.

The record of their family will be found under number 121 of this book.

THE HAINES BIBLE.

WHEN our ancestor came to this country he brought his Bible with him, and saved it from the wreck which he experienced at Pemaquid, Me., Aug. 15, 1635. Tradition has it that at the time of the wreck it was sewed up in a feather bed, and thus saved from destruction. It does not show the marks of having been thoroughly It is a copy of the Genevan version printed in London, Engwet. land, by the deputies of Christopher Barker in 1599, and is called the "Breeches Bible," because of the rendering of Gen. iii. 7: "Then the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed figge-tree leaves together, and made themselves breeches." This edition was highly esteemed by our Puritan ancestors because of marginal notes. This copy was kept by the different generations who lived on the old homestead at Greenland; and when the place was sold by Samuel Haines of the fourth generation he took it with him to Wakefield, where he settled, and it was in possession of his descendants until it passed into the hands of Andrew Mack Haines of Galena, Ill., and is now the property of his son, Samuel Andrew Haines of San Francisco, Cal. It bears the marks of much usage. Nearly twenty-nine chapters of Genesis have been lost, also more than six chapters of Matthew, and all beyond the First Epistle to the Corinthians. It evidently has been studied with great care, as there have been penned many marginal notes, some of which are in Latin; and a great number of the deeply expressive texts have been carefully underscored with purple ink. This pre-eminently is the case in the Gospel according to St. John. And a great many of the capital letters, with the indices to the margin, have been illuminated with red ink. Many of the Psalms are marked with the word "morning," and others with the word "evening," probably with the view to morning and evening reading. Some of the choice texts are written with pen on the margin, probably with the view of making them more impressive. On a blank space at the beginning of the Prophecy of Isaiah appears a well-drawn greyhound collared, while underneath is written the word "Filemon." Some one of the early generations had an artistic taste, for there are half a dozen portraits indicative of genius on marginal leaves in the Book of Ezekiel. Two or three of them may have been intended to outline the features of members of the family. The others were a creation of the imagination. While this Bible has passed its tri-centennial, its chief value consists in the fact that our first ancestor to this country read it and prayed over it, and that it thus must have been one important agent in making him the true and noble, intelligent, and large-hearted man that he was. The loss of the first pages of both the Old and New Testaments is to be regretted, as very likely they contained records which would be of great value to us. The King James version of the Bible was published the year Deacon Samuel Haines was born, but the Genevan version was so highly appreciated by the English people that its publication was continued until 1641. But as this book was published in 1599, it might have been owned by Deacon Samuel's father, who gave it to him. This opinion Mr. A. M. Haines expressed in a letter to me several years before he died.

THE GREYHOUND.

AND as it was informed me Kynge Richarde had a greyhounde called Mathe who allways wayted upon the Kynge, and would know no man else. For whensoever the Kynge did ryde, he that kepte the greyhounde dyd lette hym lose, and he would streught runne to the Kynge and fowne upon hym, and leape with his fore fete upon the Kynges shoulders. And as the Kynge and the erle of Derby talked together in the courte, the greyhounde who was wont to leape upon the Kynge, left the Kynge and came to the erle of Derby, duke of Lancaster, and made to hym the same friendly countenance and chere, as he was wont to do to the Kynge. The duke who knewe not the greyhounde, demanded of the Kynge what the greyhounde would do. Cosyn, quod the Kynge, it is a great good token to you, and an evyle sygne to me. Sir how know that quod the duke? I know it well, quod the Kynge. The greyhounde maketh you chere this day as Kynge of England, so you shall be, and I shall be deposed; the greyhounde hath the knowledge naturellye; therefore take hym to you; he will folow you and forsake me.

The duke understood well these wordes, and cherished the greyhounde who would never after follow the Kynge Richarde II, but followed the duke of Lancaster.

FROISSART B. E. & W. vol. xvii. p. 656.

Near the conflux of the Colwyn and the Glasllyn stands the small village of Beddgelert. Here was once a priory dedicated to St. Mary, for monks of the Augustine order, the foundation of which Tanner ascribes to the last Llewelyn, and except Bardsey, this was probably the most ancient monastic institution in North Wales. For it appears from grants of lands, made by divers benefactors, that it subsisted long prior to that period; and Rymer recites in his Foedera a charter in which certain lands were bestowed on it by Llewelyn in the year 1194. A traditionary account recorded by the bards states that he was the founder, and that on a most extraordinary occasion. - The prince had a hunting seat at this place, and during the absence of the family a wolf entered the house, and Llewelyn returning first, was met at the door by his favorite greyhound, Gelert, who was a present to him from his father-in-law, King John. His mouth was covered with blood. The prince alarmed at the circumstance, hastened to the nursery where he found the cradle overturned, and the ground wet with gore. On his momentary alarm for the fate of his infant son, supposing it had been killed by the dog, he drew his sword and stabled the animal while he was caressing his master. But what was the consternation of the latter, when on turning up the cradle, he found his son alive and sleeping by the side of the wolf, which had been slain by the faithful and vigilant Gelert. The eircumstance appears to have had such an effect on the prince's mind, that he erected a tomb over the dog's grave on the spot where subsequently the before mentioned church was built, which was from this incident denominated Bedd Gelert, or the grave of Gelert: then he also founded a monastery for the good of his soul, and as a grateful offering to divine Providence for the preservation of his child. - Beauties of England and Wales, vol. xxii. pp. 404 - 5.

THE SHIP ANGEL GABRIEL.

THE ship Angel Gabriel was built by Sir Charles Snell of Kingston, St. Michaels, North Wilts, England, for Sir Walter Raleigh. Sir Charles in his youth was intimate with Sir Walter; but he became very dissipated, and the ship cost him a large amount of real estate, which upon Sir Walter's attainder was forfeited. She was built for the expedition against Guiana, and must have been finished prior to 1617, for in that year he made his second and last voyage there. She was granted Letters of Marque by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, during the year 1630, the date of the commission being Oct. 16, 1630. She belonged in Bristol, and at that time was commanded by Michael Hunt, who was part owner. Rev. Richard Mather says, "The Angel Gabriel is a strong ship, and well furnished with fourteen or sixteen pieces of ordnance, and therefore our seamen rather desired her company; but she is slow in sailing." On June 4, 1635, a fleet of five vessels left Bristol, England, three of them bound for Newfoundland, viz., the Diligence, a ship of 150 tons; the Mary, a small ship of 80 tons; and the Bess; and two were bound for New England, viz., the Angel Gabriel, of 240 tons, and the James, of 220 tons. The Angel Gabriel, being a slow-sailing vessel, fell behind, though not so much but that she was able to anchor in the outer harbor at Pemaquid at the time the James anchored at the Isles of Shoals. This was on Friday, Aug. 14, and being moonlight, the first part of the night was passed quietly; but before morning a north-east wind came up, and "blew with such violence with abundance of rain, that it blew down many hundreds of trees, overthrew some houses, drave ships from their anchor etc." The storm ravaged the whole coast from Nova Scotia to Manhattan, continuing with great fury for five or six hours. The tide rose in some places more than twenty feet "right up and down." It is said that the tide not only rose to a remarkable height at about the proper time, but was followed by only a partial ebb, and then was immediately succeeded by another tidal wave which rose higher than the first. During the storm the wind changed from north-east to north-west. The Angel Gabriel, probably now feeling the full force of the wind, was torn from her anchorage, and dashed in pieces upon the shore. One seaman and three or four passengers were lost, while two others had died on the voyage. All the rest got safely on land. Among the passengers were John Bailey and his son John, who afterwards settled in Newbury, Mass., John Cogswell and his family, who settled in Ipswich, Samuel Haines, William Furber, and John Tuttle, who first made their homes in what is now Dover. During this gale the James was torn from her anchorage at the Shoals, and although in great peril, escaped destruction. Rev. Increase Mather states that "the Angel Gabriel was the first vessel which miscarried with passengers from Old England to New, so signally did the Lord in his providence watch over the plantation of New England." That storm has gone into history as the "Great Hurricane."
